Two U.S. Diplomats Killed in Lebanon

Times News Services

The U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, a second American diplomat and their chauffeur were killed in Beirut today, White House officials said.

The Red Cross reported it had found the three bodies, the officials added.

Word the bodies had been found was sent to President Ford while he was in a White House conference with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, CIA director George Bush and others discussing the earlier reported disappearance of Ambassador Francis Meloy and diplomat Robert Waring.

Ford, Kissinger, Bush and the others in the White House meeting spent about 50 minutes more in discussion before dispersing.

Kissinger emerged from the session with a grim expression on his face and only a curt nod to reporters waiting in the sun outside the White House west wing executive office entrance.

Meloy is the fourth U.S. official to vanish in Beirut in less than a year. The other three were kidnapped and, after lengthy detentions, released.

The Palestine Liberation Front, which was implicated in the earlier kidnaps, has denied any knowledge of today's incident.

Meanwhile, for the first time in weeks, neither Moslem nor Christian broadcasts in Beirut made any mention of fighting anywhere in Lebanon.

The lull followed announcements by Arab mediators that Syria will lift its blockade of Beirut and other coastal cities and that Lebanese Christian leaders have given conditional approval to a pan-Arab peacekeeping force for their country.

However, in Damascus, a senior Syrian official called Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat "a fool" and warned that his continued opposition to Syria is damaging the Palestinian cause.

In one of the most open declarations to date of the Palestinians' long reliance on Syria as a base of operations against Israel, the official, who declined to be identified, said:

"Arafat really is a fool — any Palestinian leader who stands against Syria is not only a fool, but is acting against the Palestinian cause. For without Syria there is no Palestine."

AMIN 'FAKED' DEATH PLOT

Manchester Guardian

DAR ES SALAAM — There was no attempt last week on the life of Ugandan President Idi Amin, according to well-informed sources in Kampala.

Radio Uganda had reported that three hand grenades "of the type used by Israel and the United States" had been hurled at Amin last Thursday while he was reviewing a graduation-parade at a police academy near Kampala.

Reliable Ugandan government sources say that the whole thing was a hoax put together by Amin and his staff.

Sources who were present at the Neambya police barracks said that Amin's bodyguard opened fire on the crowd without provocation.

One source, who was near the president at the time, said that a dud hand grenade was tossed but it was not aimed at Amin.

The source said he believes it was a signal for the body guard to begin firing.

Eyewitnesses said that Amin also participated in the shooting.

The sources said that Amin staged the incident for three reasons.

The first is that he had heard rumors circulating in Kampala about a planned coup for early next month when Organization of African Unity heads of state meet in Mauritius.

The second reason, the sources said, was to demonstrate his supernatural ability to survive to the Ugandan populace.

The third reason was to do away with certain people present at the parade. Sources could not specify which.

The sources also say that reports of mass reprisals following the incident are false.

Six Killed, 33 Hurt As Blacks Rampage

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — At least six people were killed today when police clashed with 10,000 black high school students in a segregated township just outside the city.

At least 33 people were admitted to hospital, 19 of them with bullet wounds, in the wake of what one source called "the biggest anti-government demonstration in years."

There are fears that the rioting may spread from the Soweto township, home for more than one million blacks where the students are protesting mandatory use of Afrikaans in the schools.

Brig. R. Le Roux, commanding police operations, termed the situation "very bad."

He said houses, cars and other property was being burned and stoned.

Some of the pupils were reported to have seized a policeman as a hostage to order police to withdraw from the riot area.

The rioting began when high school pupils began gathering at several points in Soweto to march on Phefeni Junior Secondary High School, focus of a five-week protest by some 800 Soweto pupils against the use of Afrikaans.

All available police in the Soweto area and a large number of reinforcements from Johannesburg rushed to the area.

Witnesses said the police fired into the air in efforts to scatter the mobs, but the pupils regrouped and began throwing rocks, breaking the windows of police cars.

The police pulled back and positioned themselves at the nearby Orlando police station.

Many of the pupils speak Afrikaans with difficulty and it is widely regarded as the language of white oppression.

Controllers Warned On Strike

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A strike by air traffic controllers over the use of French at airports would be "illegal" and if it came the government would "act accordingly," Treasury Board president Jean Chretien said Tuesday.

He would not reveal what action government would take but said "we will see" when asked if a court injunction would be obtained to block a walkout.

CATCA President Jim Livingston said the results of a current strike vote would be known on Saturday and that, if positive, the strike would be called for Monday.

BUS PASSES OFFERED TO UVIC STUDENTS

A bus pass will be offered to University of Victoria students in September, costing $30 for three months and covering any number of bus rides during that period.

The student pass is an experiment worked out by university and B.C. Hydro and will be assessed at year-end to see whether it will be extended over the spring term.

With bus fares at 25 cents, the student is ahead with the pass if he or she uses the bus more than 10 trips a week, Peter Darling, senior management consultant at the university, said today.

He said pressure from students for some sort of transit assistance was accentuated by car insurance rate increases earlier this year. Several bus lines serve the campus.

In addition, the university has a shortage of parking space and hopes the pass will stimulate bus use and ease that difficulty.

The pass will be available to students when they register in September and will cover the period Sept. 13 to Dec. 17, he said.

Air Canada Debt $14M Already?

OTTAWA (CP) — The auditor general of Canada should conduct an immediate audit into the Air Canada finance branch in Winnipeg, Dan McKenzie (PC — Winnipeg South Centre) said in the house Tuesday.

During the first four months of this year the government owned airline, he said, has recorded a deficit of $14.5 million or $2 million more than the airline's total deficit of $12.5 million for last year.

McKenzie told the commons a financial analysis for Touche Ross and Company has found that if Air Canada had "realistic accounting" applied to it the airline's loss last year would have been around $100 million.

The Winnipeg member said conflicting reports were published in the Winnipeg Free Press Saturday edition regarding the financial problems of Air Canada.

McKenzie said an Air Canada public relations official had denied that problems in the finance branch existed.

"This is in direct conflict with the findings of the Estey Report and known cases of financial mismanagement of the Air Canada finance branch," said the member.

Mulek Plans Going Ahead

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The developer of Victoria's most-criticized highrise, the View Towers building at View and Quadra, is preparing plans for a further development on the site — nearly four years after he was refused a building permit for a second tower.

Vancouver developer George Mulek confirmed Tuesday that proposals are being worked out, but said he could not indicate how long it will be before he is able to submit plans to City Hall.

"We have always been planning on building the second phase," he added, but declined to give any further information.

After a lapse of so many years since the first stage of the development, a 19-storey low-rental apartment, was built, many Victoria residents apparently believed that the rest of the project had been abandoned.

But a city planning official said the property is too big and valuable, and Mulek has too much invested in it, for him to pull out half-way through.

The official confirmed that Mulek has telephoned City Hall a couple of times in the past few weeks to discuss the completion of the development.

"He has been trying to sift through his prospects and possibilities," he said. "Mr. Mulek has asked us what the frames of reference would be for completing the development, and he has talked about coming over to see us with his architect."

Mayor Mike Young, who in his days as an alderman once told Mulek that the only thing he could do to improve the appearance of the 19-storey apartment tower was to "paint it with invisible paint," also said Tuesday he had heard of the developer's renewed interest.

Young said if and when Mulek approaches the city with fresh proposals, council will "treat him as a gentle-

Mail Bomb Extortion Widens

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — FBI Director Clarence Kelley said Tuesday that a series of letter bombs mailed to corporate offices apparently are part of a scheme to extort millions of dollars from 200 business firms around the U.S.

And envelopes filled with ticks, possibly disease-bearing, may be part of the same plot.

Thirteen bombs, contained in Manila envelopes, were delivered Monday to seven corporations and the homes of five corporate executives. The recipients were in five different cities or their immediate suburbs.

A 14th letter bomb, believed to be part of the same wave of mailings, was received Tuesday at the Combined Insurance Co. of America office in Worthington, Ohio, a suburb of Columbus.

"Over a period of several months, numerous large corporations in the United States have received a series of extortion letters wherein demands have been made for large sums of money to be paid with the threat of terrorist tactics unless these demands were met," Kelley said.

FBI scientists are investigating the possibility a batch of ticks mailed in a plain brown envelope to an insurance firm were infected with a variety of deadly diseases.

The ticks were discovered Tuesday, 24 hours after they arrived at the regional office of Combined Insurance Co. of America. They were mailed in an envelope similar to the ones which delivered the letter bombs.

B.C. May Look to Courts In Revenue Cuts Protest

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The B.C. government might challenge in court the federal government's unilateral decision to end a $800 million program of revenue guarantees to the provinces, Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday.

Bennett said upon his return from the two-day first ministers' conference in Ottawa that the unexpected federal announcement near the end of the meeting Tuesday afternoon caused "stunned silence" in the meeting room.

The premier said he did not angrily walk out of the meeting before it ended, as some reports had indicated. He said he wouldn't let the late development "influence the relationship between B.C. and Ottawa."

The federal move, which had been proposed to the Canadian premiers earlier this year — and rejected by them — will cost B.C. about $60 million.

"What this means is our taxpayers will have to do without $60 million in service," Bennett said, and Ottawa's position has made it "hard for the provinces to have confidence in future agreements they make with the federal government."

The four-year-old revenue guarantee program, involving the transfer of about $800 million, was established to give the provinces compensating payments to offset financial losses caused by federal tax reforms in 1972.

The provinces had been told they would suffer no financial loss because of the changes.

Bennett said federal finance minister Donald Macdonald's announcement Tuesday put a dampening effect on what otherwise had been a successful conference.

He said constitutional law experts of the B.C. government attended the meeting and would begin work on a possible court challenge of the federal move.

"If there had been some rationalization then, we probably wouldn't be so angry," Bennett said. "But what Mr. Macdonald said certainly didn't persuade me."

He said the decision will have a minimal effect on the province's current $3.6 billion budget because the first instalment to B.C. — about $13 million — was due this year.

Bennett said major strides had been made towards agreement on federal-provincial cost-sharing programs for health and education.

He said the discussion on bringing the Canadian constitution home from England was described by many premiers as the "best ever."

PRICE CHECK?

Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday he has asked his staff to examine what actions the province could take to control food prices because he has been dissatisfied with the performance of the federal Anti-Inflation Board in controlling them. A provincial food prices review board might be set up, he said, but it might be too expensive and impractical to operate.

Dumping Board Boss Accused

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Progressive Conservatives Tuesday demanded an investigation into the possible conflict of interest of a public servant whom they said tried to sell everything from frozen fish to Swedish rifle sights.

Elmer MacKay, the Nova Scotia MP whose revelations started the Sky Shops affair, demanded an investigation under the federal Inquiries Act of J. P. C. Gauthier, chairman of the federal anti-dumping tribunal.

MacKay told reporters that documents he has uncovered apparently show that Gauthier put himself in an unacceptable position in conducting business while he was on the tribunal.

The anti-dumping tribunal is a federal agency charged with preventing products from being dumped on the Canadian market at prices lower than those charged in the country of manufacture.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said that Mr. Gauthier officially retired as tribunal chairman last December "with the intention of taking on a new career," but stayed on an extra six months at the request of the government.

"He did indicate to me that he would be undertaking another career which would not be in conflict with his present responsibilities, but that he would discharge his responsibilities as chairman . . . until the end of this month," Macdonald said.

MacKay had asked if the government felt that according to the provisions of the Anti-Dumping Act, the chairman should "devote his full time and attention to his official position and refrain from commercial activities of a private or personal nature for his own benefit or the benefit of associates."

MacKay told the Commons that Gauthier "has been ac-

Keenleyside Backs Firemen In Pay Bid

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, fresh from his role as associate commissioner-general for Habitat, today supported Victoria firefighters in their contract arbitration bid for parity with Vancouver. (See also Page 24)

The former co-chairman of B.C. Hydro, ex-diplomat, public administrator and author of a report on firefighting in British Columbia, told arbitration chairman John Davie that firemen generally are subject to greater risks than police and deserve comparable remuneration.

In his study for the attorney-general, firefighting in British Columbia, Keenleyside said he concluded that although it would not be true in all circumstances, "overall I think it is undoubtedly true the difficulties and dangers faced by firemen are greater than those faced by police."

He found there was no uniformity in remuneration or benefits received by firemen and police and that there is a "tendency in North America to give higher rewards to members of police forces. But this is not universally true."

It was reasonable and fair in comparing the difficulties and dangers faced by firefighters and police in the conduct of their duties to make remuneration in all forms comparable, the witness said.

He also agreed with a firefighters' union submission that death and total disability benefits should be supplemented.

"In principle, I don't think they or their dependents are being adequately protected under existing arrangements, and I think something should be done about it."

Dr. Keenleyside said he thought firemen would do their jobs better and benefit the community more if they all took basic first aid courses. This should eventually become standard practice and should be recognized by increased compensation.

The union and city of Victoria are in their fifth day of an arbitration hearing for a 1976 contract. The city's case was expected to begin later today.

St. Pierre Fishery New Woe

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks will have to be held with France over its intention to declare a 200-mile offshore fisheries and economic zone for French territories, an external affairs spokesman said today.

The French islands of St. Pierre-Miquelon, 15 miles off the south coast of Newfoundland, will have to become the subject of negotiations, he said.

Canada has announced it will have a 200-mile fisheries jurisdiction by Jan. 1.

At least one Conservative MP has voiced concern about France's intentions for St. Pierre-Miquelon.

A spokesman for Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said there have been no negotiations with France.

Both he and the external spokesman said more information may become available after legal officials of the two departments have time to study the French proposal.

man" and listen to what he has to say.

He said council might agree to the second phase of the development proceeding under a land-use contract, which would ensure effective controls, provided that it complemented the present apartment structure in a comprehensive design treatment.

Controversy has surrounded the project almost from the start. The stark, slab-like appearance of the building has been criticized both inside and outside City Hall as a "monstrosity" and an "eyesore."

In the late summer of 1972 city council, under insistent pressure from former mayor Peter Pollen, reversed an earlier decision to allow the developer to proceed with the second phase, which would have exceeded the city's then-new height and density limits on downtown construction.

Denied a building permit, Mulek left the construction site strewn with building equipment and materials, which council condemned as both unsightly and a fire hazard.

Several months later, under threats of legal action from the city, the developer finally agreed to clean up the site, demolish an old building at the Fort-Quadra intersection and surround the property with a fence.

Mulek's original plan, approved by the city in 1968, was to build two towers connected by a number of retail stores, with one of the amenities being a "rooftop garden" for apartment residents.

The first tower was built with a low-cost Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation mortgage, with the understanding it was to be made available at controlled rents.

From the developer's viewpoint the really profitable aspect of the project was to be the second phase, a lower highrise fronting on Quadra.

tively promoting his private business interests in a large scale manner while holding a senior position in the employ of the government of Canada."

He later told reporters the chairman was allegedly involved in ventures touching on a range of goods from "frozen fish to rifle sights."

However, the MP for Central Nova failed to get House approval for a motion that would have set up an investigation of the matter under the Inquiries Act.

Gauthier is out of the country, but Macdonald said he will look into the allegations.

An aide to Macdonald said the finance minister has asked that Gauthier be recalled so he can give his side of the story.

Until then Macdonald would have no comment on the allegations.

It is not expected his comment would be available until Thursday since today he accompanies Prime Minister Trudeau to Washington.

MacKay told the Commons that Gauthier's activities included "lobbying our military including the chief of the Defence Staff, Gen. J. Dextraze, and extolling the apparently dubious, according to our military tests, virtues of a Swedish rifle sight called Aimpoint for which he and his associates have been actively seeking exclusive marketing rights."

Term Extended For Inquiry

NANAIMO (CP) — Labor minister Allan Williams has extended the term of the five-man industrial inquiry commission into the Nanaimo-Ladysmith civic workers dispute by another 14 days.

Chairman Louis Lindholm of Victoria said the commission would not be able to come up with a binding recommendation in the original 14-day period.

Clinics Draw 224 Donors

Blood clinics at Red Cross House Monday and Tuesday drew a total of 224 donors, leaving the week-long campaign 76 donors short of its target after two days, a spokesman said today.

The clinic today is at Naden in HMC Dockyard.

On Thursday and Friday the clinic will be at Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Uranium Abundant

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States has enough uranium to supply all existing and planned nuclear power plants through their lifetimes, plus any additional reactors put into service by 1990, a report released Tuesday by the U.S. department of commerce says. It says a recent estimate by the Energy Research and Development Administration indicates there are 4.84 million tons of recoverable uranium oxide in the U.S.

Health Cuts Arouse Ire

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's restraint on health-research spending is a shortsighted betrayal of both present and future Canadians, opposition spokesman charged in the Commons Tuesday.

Spokesmen for all three opposition parties zeroed in particularly on the $49 million budget of the Medical Research Council, saying the money allotted to health experimenaation was not enough to keep up with current inflation rates.

Science Minister C. M. Drury, responding for the government, however, said in comparison with other counaries, research by both government and universities ranked high.

Members were debating a motion by Paul Yewchuk which said ill-consdiered and illogical decisions of the government failed to give proper priority to health research.

Yewchuk said as of two months ago, about 40 per cent of long-term health research projects supported by federal funds had been terminated and only 10 per cent of a proposed 400 new projects had been started.

Discovery of new treatments and prevention through research had saved the U.S. about $2 billion a year in the case of polio, $180 million a year in the case of measles vaccine and $100 million a year in costs arising from hepatitis contracted during transfusions, he said.

"If the minister thinks he is saving money by cutting medical research, he is indeed malinformed and is doing Canada a disservice," he said.

Drury also contradicted Yewchuk's statement that researchers were leaving for the U.S.

From July, 1974 to June, 1975, the U.S. gained 24 Canadian researchers while Canada gained 58 American researchers, he said.

Drury said it was only partly true that health costs can be reduced as a result of medical research.

In the past 10 years, he said, research costs have risen even more than health care costs.

Canada First, Clark Stress

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Canadian Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark told President Ford Tuesday that any Canadian government would have to follow a "Canada first" policy on energy questions.

Completing what he called "a full, informative, satisfying two days of visits in Washington," Clark said he told Ford there is no "fundamental difference in thinking between the two major parties in Canada" on this issue.

"Any government would have to follow a policy which gave primacy to serving Canadian needs," Clark said.

He also said he assured Mr. Ford the breakdown in the deal to buy long-range military patrol aircraft from Lockheed had been caused by difficulties in arranging financing for the financially-troubled U.S. manufacturer "and not to the Canadian commitment to play an active role in NATO."

The opposition leader said, however, he found "there is generally a feeling that relations are basically sound.

"There are, of course, some irritants. There always are."

Clark said the visit, his first to a foreign capital since becoming Conservative chief earlier this year, was to establish a face-to-face relationship with American leaders he would have to deal with whenever he formed a new government in Canada.

OTTAWA — Liberal MP Frank Maine had a red face in more ways than one Tuesday.

He showed up for a Commons session sporting a sunburn and ascot to match and won a rebuke from Speaker James Jerome for "improper attire."

Maine, saying the sunburn makes a regular tie uncomfortable, said he will continue to defy a Commons regulation stating male members should wear a suit jacket, shirt and tie while in the House.

He has a supporter in the person of Solicitor-General Warren Allmand who said he, too, would like to wear an ascot in the Commons.

"I want the same freedon that the women have in dress," Allmand said, citing Flora MacDonald's and Iona Campagnola's sleeveless

Robert Muir, (PC — Cape Breton) noted earlier precedents where the Speaker had chastized Prime Minister Trudeau and Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliette) when they wore ascots instead of ties in the Commons.

Maine should not "just be quietly told to ease out," he said.

Mr. Trudeau appeared in the Commons wearing sandals and an open-necked shirt and was criticized by former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

WOMAN WANTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Anti-Inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin would like a woman with a background in economics and an interest in consumers to replace Beryl Plumpare, who resigned last week as board vice-chairman.

Pepin told a news conference Tuesday that he also hoped the government would also be albe to find a second vice-chairman — originally planned but never appointed— to represent the interests of labor.

Pepin attacked suggestions that conflicts within the board and disagreements with the controls policy had contributed to Mrs. Plumptre's resignation.

There had been a normal difference of views on some secondary matters among the strong personalities on the board, he said, but there was agreement on essentials.

Gun Control Bill Passes Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee, in a forced march that began April 27, Tuesday spent seven hours passing the heavily-amended gun control section of the government's peace-and-security bill.

About 30 government amendments were adopted following briefs from gun clubs, wildlife groups.

Committee chairman Mark MacGuigan, who scheduled multiple daily sessions to accommodate the parade of witnesses, said he expects the rest of the bill to win committee passage within a week.

The committee resumes work today on the electronic surveillance section of the bill and later will deal with parole changes and provisions to put so-called dangerous offenders —those with a pattern of violent crime—away for indefinite periods.

The government hoped the bill, which would go from committee to the Commons for third reading, could clear Parliament by June 30, the scheduled date for a summer recess to start.

If it does, the government has pledged to bring its extensive firearm regulatory provisions, still being drafted, before the committee in September.

The object would be a Jan. 1, 1977, proclamation of the law and its regulations, which would go into effect gradually, by region, across Canada.

Dumont SELECT MILD cigarettes have been carefully developed to satisfy the two consistent requirements of Canadian smokers... effectively filtered mildness and good old-fashioned tobacco flavour.

Our researchers set themselves the double task of designing a filtration system that was the most efficient possible, and at the same time interfered least with the fine flavour of good tobacco.

Dumont SELECT MILD is the outstanding result of their labours...a completely new product which in every way satisfies the demands of the modern smoker for a sensibly filtered cigarette that delivers the rich tobacco flavour that smoking is all about.

Toying with Victoria's Taxis

Victoria city council's draft taxi bylaw looks as though it were put together by a bus company. If the law were enacted in its current form it would immediately drive fares up and force many small taxi firms out of business. Bumping taxi licence fees from $30 to $140 per annum in one fell swoop is arbitrary and inflationary in its own small way. This, from our city fathers who are always whining about restraint when it comes to bargaining with their own employees.

Then there is the provision that cabs must be not more than three years old. Of the 141 taxis now licensed by the city, 112, or nearly 80 per cent, are more than four years old. If the city wants to put safety first, it should insist on certain maintenance standards, rather than a blanket rule that can only favor large, well-established cab firms. Besides the annual motor vehicle branch inspections, taxis must undergo quarterly inspections by the city police too. As the manager of one taxi firm noted, the city allows double decker buses built 36 years ago to carry thousands of tourists each season without any concern as to their age.

Perhaps the most bizarre clause would prohibit taxi drivers from smoking, drinking, listening to the radio or taped music. It may not have occurred to the waterheads who drafted this bylaw, but cab drivers are human beings. Many of them own their own cars and passengers ride on the driver's sufferance. Naturally, a cabbie who is drinking alcoholic beverages as he tools around should lose his licence, but smoking and listening to music? The city fathers might apply such rules to their own liveried chauffeurs, but not to an independent entrepreneur.

About the only good things in the draft bylaw are the imposition of maximum fares and allowing taxis to cruise for fares, a practice long forbidden in Victoria. The latter proposal would make it easier to get a cab, in a city notorious for its lack of same, and increase competition, too. As for the rest of these proposals, the aldermen should put on their thinking caps and sharpen the blue pencils before they get run over by a cab.

". . . I said, thank you for making me feel better about sitting beside you and smoking . . ."

Rush to Judgment

Why is Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis in such a rush to hold a vote on whether Sooke residents want to incorporate as a municipality? He announced on Tuesday that a vote would be held June 22 — a bare two weeks, just enough time to print the ballots and official notices.

Although according to the Municipal Act he doesn't have to allow any period of time at all from the date of announcement to voting day, it is only simple common sense to allow a reasonable length of time to air the issue fully.

Unless, of course, his game is to scotch now and for years to come any talk of municipal status. Fourteen days allows little time to generate any interest or to inform people of the pros and cons of such a major step. Voters will probably reject it — even though it requires just 50 per cent approval — because of fear of the unknown. Is that the plan?

Why did the minister short-circuit the capital regional board examination of the matter, which his department had promised co-operation and funding? Three regional board members were proceeding to study the question, but by no means had they completed their efforts.

Of course, the issue of municipal status has been kicking around Sooke for years. A decade ago a vote was held on the issue, but Sooke residents defeated the proposal. Lately, despite the setback last fall when a pro-incorporationist candidate for the office of capital regional director was defeated, the Sooke-Jordan River chamber of commerce has organized those in favor of setting up a municipality.

Frankly, the advantages appear to be minimal. The area already has a good community plan (anyway, planning would probably remain a regional board function) and similarly the regional district already is empowered to set up a sewerage system, if residents want one.

But a mere two weeks doesn't allow enough time for any sort of rational discussion. Sooke will be asked to take a stab in the dark, without proper information on what options they face, how much incorporation would cost them, and so on. The vote should be put off until December, when regular school and regional board elections will have to be held anyway.

A New World?

We woke up Monday morning feeling no more reluctant than usual to get out of bed and start another week of work — that is, we felt lousy — but now all of us Monday morning shirkers have a new excuse. As of 6 p.m. Sunday, a new world began and although the transition may have seemed preternaturally smooth the Institute of Applied Metaphysics knows better.

That's the group organized by Vancouver "prophet" Winnifred Barton, who said that on or before that time spacemen would arrive on earth to help construct a new order. One of her followers said after the deadline passed that the extraterrestrial beings were already among us.

Only 15 people showed up at a theatre Sunday night to ring out the old, and Ms. Barton, the advertised speaker (at $18 a head admission), was a no show. But no matter. There'll be no jokes here about, what if they called the end of the world and nobody came.

So boss, if your employees are a little late this week straggling in and they tell you they've been helping some UFO to construct a new world on this planet, how a little understanding. Anyway, it beats to heck and gone all the old excuses like "I missed the bus" or "my alarm clock didn't go off."

Trudeau Is Not Depressed

Bulletin

Prime Minister Trudeau is not depressed. Pass this message to your spouse, your neighbor, your seat-mate on the bus.

OTTAWA — From every crack in the East Block, at the foot of the green baize doors, through the keyholes and through windows left open to catch the summer breezes, the word is being passed out that Trudeau is not depressed.

At mid-week, Trudeau told the caucus of Liberal MPs and senators that he was not depressed. Ten days ago he told the private gathering of Quebec Liberals at Mont Gabriel that he was not depressed.

It seems that a bunch of reporters, I being as guilty as any of the others, got everything all fouled up when we wrote, a fortnight ago, that Trudeau was in a despondent, downbeat mood. Later, Trudeau seemed to give credence to this speculation when he told Canadians to "stop bitching."

No Morning Person

Actually, our source for this surmise wasn't bad — Trudeau himself. Our stories all originated from a private meeting between Trudeau and a group of reporters during which he acted and talked as if thoroughly depressed — by the backlash against bilingualism, by attacks in the press against the personal integrity of some of his ministers, by the general crabbiness of Canadians during these times of economic difficulty.

The confusion, it turns out, was caused by the hour of the moment rather than by the events of the moment. The off-the-record session with reporters during which Trudeau seemed to bare his soul began at 9 a.m. Trudeau, as is well-known, is not a morning person; at that hour his metabolism is slow and his thoughts are gloomy.

Mind you, more is involved than the coincidence that Trudeau got out of the wrong side of the bed just before he happened to be meeting a bunch of reporters. Trudeau remains deeply worried about the breakdown in popular support for bilingualism, and he remains convinced that Canadians bitch too much.

History, it's a fair bet, will judge that former Conservative leader Robert Stanfield was the best prime minister we never had — a post facto accolade which still will be small compensation to Stanfield for three election defeats.

In a speech a week ago to a testimonial dinner in Halifax, Stanfield provided a measure of what we missed. He addressed himself, eloquently but much more important with balance and sensitivity, to two root problems of democratic government today, beside which the Sky Shops mini-scandal and the Lockheed buck-passing seem like ugly but trivial blots on the margin.

First, Stanfield analysed the cause of the erosion of public confidence in government, no matter which the party or who the leader in power.

"The growing disillusionment with government is partly the result of the inadequacy of politicians as such, but is mainly the consequence of exaggerated expectations of government, of expecting governments to be able to do far more than they can do."

The public, the press, the politicians themselves, all had lost perspective. "What good government can contribute to individual happiness or self-fulfilment is quite limited, although the amount of unhappiness and disruption bad government can create is enormous.

"Exaggerated expectations produced, in effect, a self-fulfilling prophecy. Continuing disillusionment with government will not only make governing more difficult, it will almost certainly mean bad government."

To compound this problem, at the same time as the public expected too much of government it was turning its back on political parties, "the one institution that can build and maintain a consensus which makes stable democratic government possible."

Stanfield Despondent

People no longer joined political parties but pressure groups.

"We are becoming a society of well-organized groups, each representing a particular interest. This is increasing the difficulty of reaching a consensus as a basis for government . . . and is leading to increasing myopia and polarization."

Stanfield's conclusion was more despondent than anything Trudeau has uttered, in public or in private.

"If we do not succeed in building a tradition of citizen participation in politics through a political party as contrasted with the exercise of pressure through special-interest organizations then democratic government in our country will grow more and more ineffectual and disillusioning as special interests snarl at each other and at govenrment. And it may be far worse you think."

Goodbye Rain

This is in reply to a letter published May 4 by Peter Burgess and entitled Hello Cowboy. A friend was kind enough to send me a copy.

Mr. Burgess implies that I am lying when I say that I could make $600 per week on an oil rig. Please find enclosed my most recent pay stub for two weeks work, May 6 to May 20. Total gross is $1,347.80. Divide this by two and you get $673.90. So much for Mr. Burgess's strong suspicions. Yes, I don't work in Edmonton. I work just outside of Fort Saskatchewan, 25 miles from home and commute on a daily basis.

As for Mr. Burgess's discussion of the compensations of better weather, the point is debatable. I myself prefer to be outside enjoying the winter than inside watching the rain pour down on March flowers. In any case Mr. Burgess has missed the whole point of my "suckers" letter. I wasn't talking about the weather. The suckers I refer to are the voting people of B. C., the same people Peter Burgess describes as "quiet, easygoing, generally mature and well-reared." My letter expressed amazement at the political situation in B.C. and Mr. Burgess acknowledges himself that the Bennett government is a disgrace. I do not consider the politics of B.C. to be characteristic of a quiet, easygoing, generally mature and well-reared populace. And, Mr. Burgess, I am not longing for the place. I had to leave to move to Alberta.—Tom Engel, Edmonton.

Glorious Increase

It was with a great sense of pride and satisfaction that I read of our country's glorious increase of pension for our senior citizens. The union members get their raise, the MPs get their raise — and the old age pensioners get their raise. It really grips you right in the heart at the thought of such benevolence. What was the increase — $1.63 per month? I can see our elderly citizens dancing for joy as they push their carts up and down the grocery aisles. Isn't it nice that there are so many goodies to choose from. Think of the meat and eggs and milk all that money will buy!

In this day and age of rich governments, rich leaders, rich employers and rich workers I have only one word: "Shame"! — Concerned.

Shoal Bay—site of proposed sewage pumping station.

Beautification?

I was interested in reading the report in the June 10 Times of the proposals for Shoal Bay — a beautification program and a sewer pumping station.

Most of the residents who are very concerned about spoiling Shoal Bay by building a large sewer pumping station turned up at a meeting of a council committee last Wednesday. They were told that the subject would not be discussed that night but would be brought up again in committee on June 22. No mention was made about other proposals for Shoal Bay which were to be discussed, so it would seem that the committee chairman did not want the citizens to hear about the beautification plans which were discussed after the public had left.

There seems to be a paradox when the council is to consider the spending of about $450,000 in beautification — even if they do get help from the regional district — when they feel that it would save money to put a large sewer pumping station in the same Shoal Bay.

Why not use the $450,000 to keep Shoal Bay the way it is and locate the pumping station out of the way of residences? — John E. Smart, 548 Beach Drive.

Unborn Ignored

At the risk of repeating myself and being accused of quibbling over words, may I say to Mary Anne Erickson (whose letter Clarification appeared in the June 11 issue) that her remark "If she feels she can't care properly for a child, she should be able to have an abortion" is not, as she says, a "statement" but rather a judgment and a judgment which would deprive an innocent soul of life. Once again, the other individual involved in pregnancy, the unborn, is ignored. Were this merely a matter of conscience between an individual (ther mother) and her doctor, all very well, but it never is. A child is always involved, unborn it is true but no less a child for that. Who gave Canadians the right to take innocent human life? Then, too, since when have matters of conscience involved only an individual and her or his doctor? A trained moral sense is needed to interpret the conscience, and we in our society have always looked to our religious leaders for guidance in such matters.

In her judgment, Mary Anne also ignores the obvious: if a mother is not able to care for her child, that is not an excuse for, let alone a reason to tolerate, abortion. However much courage she may need, she should bring her child to term, and then put it out for adoption. Goodness knows there is enough need. — R. B. D. Terry, 524 Dallas Road.

Rental Increases

On June 5, a "Disgusted" landlord complained that the 10.6 per cent increase in rents will pay only tax increases and that, in 1975 his or her total rental profit from four units in two duplexes (in one of which she/he resides) was 2.5 per cent.

Such statements are misleading. First, the rental value of each unit would be no higher than about $85 per month for a 10.6 per cent rent increase to be consumed by the property tax increase. Moreover, how does "Disgusted" expect people, whose wage increases are being limited by governments to less than 10.6 per cent, to pay any more than that amount for a rent increase when British Columbia's 12-month cost of living increase to April has exceeded 11 per cent?

Finally, "Disgusted" has spoken only of profit from rent. Would he or she, therefore, be willing to get out of a bad deal and sell the duplexes for a mere 100 per cent profit beyond his or her purchase price (after depreciation of capital costs as shown on income tax returns)?

My guess would be that the unfortunate landlord has realized at least a 20 per cent annual profit during the past five years (in addition to rental income) if the fair market value of the duplexes is calculated as a percentage increase over the original purchase price (as depreciated for income tax purposes in calculating the 1975 2.5 per cent rental profits).

I agree—a 10.6 per cent increase is disgusting. — Daniel J. Koenig, 3869 Persimmon Drive.

Negative Legislation

May I clarify my letter which appeared in the Times May 31 for Mr. Lubick, whose letter appeared in the Times June 8?

Re Neighborhood Eyesore Raises Saanich Ire, June 9:

I read with interest about two gentlemen and the rundown property.

Perhaps some ill fate has come to the owner who is in Yugoslavia. Why don't the 21 angry neighbors turn that energy into work of love and clean up the yard and cut the grass? (The two gentlemen pictured look like they could use the exercise!) Surely if there is a drop of Christianity among any one of the 21 involved as angry neighbors, instead of pointing fingers, why not form a work bee until the owner returns to claim his property? In the Bible it is quoted as no one knows in what hour He will arrive. Cannot the neighbors do a bit of "do unto others" rather than "tsk-tsk-tsking?"

I am a newcomer to Victoria and have been fortunate in finding very kind, helpful people. I feel sorry for the owner, Mr. Zikov. I am glad I don't live in his neighborhood. — A Newcomer to Victoria.

Museum Education

I was very disappointed and annoyed when I found out today that there were no educational summer programs at our beautiful provincial museum in Victoria. I cannot understand why these excellent programs have been cancelled. I have taken these courses for the last two years. I think that the youngsters of B.C. should be able to learn about our country, Canada, our province, B.C., and even more so our own city, Victoria. I took almost every course and I thoroughly enjoyed them. I hope that other children will agree with me and the programs will soon be taking place again.—Jane de Faye, 3011 Foul Bay Road.

Help Cut Off

Callous indifference or gross stupidity! What manner of men are those who would use government funds to underwrite a rehabilitation program for an individual and then refuse any further assistance later?

After completing an excellent program for alcohol dependency at Dallas Road and making all possible effort to find work, I was refused any further assistance or help in getting to another location to seek meaningful employment.

The reason: I had not considered taking the only newspaper-advertised job listing commensurate with my abilities, that of bartender.

Thwarted as I am in obtaining unemployment benefits through bureaucratic ambiguity I am forced in the interim to find other avenues of existence. Through Manpower's job-finding agency's help in telexing to other centres I might find employment and combined with my own efforts and the help of community services I might manage to cope. — B.G.F.

Useless

This government really seems to believe it's a punishable offence to live on an island, especially a small one.

When ferry rates on main routes were doubled, we Gulf Islanders found our rates tripled and quadrupled.

Every time Transport Minister Jack Davis made a concession, there was a catch in it. The half-price commuter tickets promised to residents were issued in such a way that 98 per cent of us couldn't use them.

Now comes another "concession." Residents are to get half-fare for passengers, but pay 80 per cent of the full rate for cars. So round trip for car and driver from Saltspring to Vancouver Island costs $5 instead of the $2 we used to pay. We are still being gouged by a 150 per cent increase instead of a "mere" 100 per cent.

For us ferry travel is a necessity, not a holiday luxury. Medical and dental treatments, shopping, and business matters all require it.

It seems that the latest concession to the islands will mean that Mr. Davis may milk us for only $29 million instead of $30 million. My heart bleeds for him. — Islander.

Wallace Routed By Southerner

By MYRA MACPHERSON

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — George Wallace last week played the last role after more than a decade of being a force in American presidential politics. He turned his 168 delegates over to Jimmy Carter.

After a last feeble attempt in California, Wallace had lost even his remaining hope of being an influence at the Democratic National convention.

It was a final irony that Wallace — who made his way out of the South in 1964 yelling "segregation forever," then broadened his appeal and reached across the country to build a powerful movement — would be so thoroughly whipped by another southerner.

The one-time cocky bantam rooster king of millions of frustrated and angry, "bitter people," who sent big-government a message through their Wallace votes, sits in his wheelchair and there is no fight left. "I paved the way for a Jimmy Carter," he said softly in a recent interview.

His head bent, one hand bracing his back against the pain, he is a frail figure. His hand does not brush away the ashes that fall on his unfeeling leg as he flicks his cigar in the vicinity of the spittoon on the floor in his governor's office.

'Pointy Heads'

He does not even bristle at the suggestion that the unifying gesture of endorsing Carter is a strange end for the man who stood outside and yelled at the establishment. He was the master rouser of crowds who shouted about "pointy-headed liberals" and "anarchists" and appealed to the darkest fears of racism while articulating concerns that worried many — crime, busing, higher taxes, lower services, bigger government. He now said quietly of his final act in his fourth and last presidential bid, "well, it's a role, isn't it?"

That was not the way it was supposed to be. Now political analysts are trying to understand why the Wallace movement collapsed so fast in this year's primary campaign.

He had raised $7 million — more than any other candidate — through direct mail. When Ted Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey were left out of last year's polls, Wallace led them. He was a power.

The explanation of Wallace's vanishing strength is complex. The standard explanation that he became a helpless shadow power in a wheelchair when a bullet shattered his spine in a Laurel, Mo., shopping centre four years ago, is too simple.

That is the explanation Wallace uses mostly, as if Arthur Bremer, the Milwaukee bus boy with his crazed assassin's mission, did it all.

To be sure, how Wallace was viewed as a cripple was, indeed, a major factor.

But he was also an old face selling old wares — wares that had been picked up and polished and improved upon by new faces that lent them a new respectability. Busing and law and order became issues for everyone from President Ford and Ronald Reagan to Jimmy Carter and Scoop Jackson. "All of them done stole my water. They're drinking out of my dipper," he complained.

Protest vote

"We worked for over a year and half to put together a New Majority Coalition," said Richard Viguerie, who conducted Wallace's direct mail operation, "but we woke up one day and discovered that Carter done run off with our coalition, and people forget that one major source of Wallace's support was Republicans. He was the only game in town from the conservative standpoint for several years — now Reagan's siphoned them off."

Political analysts for years have categorized Wallace's support as primarily a protest vote. His strength was in being "anti"; it was not in articulating change.

Ned McWherter, speaker of the Tennessee House of Representatives, where Wallace got 83 per cent of the vote in the 1972 primary and was trounced by Carter this May, said that, even before Carter, the people of his state had decided that "Wallace was too extreme and would never deliver. Now they feel they've got a southerner who can not only send a message, but can deliver."

What the people saw when Wallace made his appearances was a quiet, immobile little man, protected by a sea of secret servicemen and panes of bullet proof glass — not the shouting, touching, leaping-down-off-the-stage-to-mingle candidate they once knew.

He now wants desperately to go down in history as a man who helped bring the party "back to where it belonged."

Ironically, he might be remembered as the man who helped bring about change for blacks. Some in the South feel that his militant stance against civil and voting rights focused international attention on those who marched for freedom to Selma and hastened support for their cause.

Sitting in the marble building that was the capitol of the confederacy, Wallace insisted recently that "I am not a racist" and that his actions years ago were intended only to defy federal intervention in state affairs.

"We are seeing an end of a Wallace era," said A. Jay Cooper, mayor of Prichard, Ala., and a black man. "That virulent type of articulating anti-black issues is no longer in vogue and the people who listened to him are out of vogue." He added caustically that racism is still everywhere, only in more subtle forms.

The question now is where can Wallace go in Alabama — not national — politics. At 56, he refers to himself as "old" and looks back. He said he is happy to be alive and able to "look out over yonder at the greenery."

But there is a sense of depression and defeat. A friend once said, "He ain't got but one serious appetite and that's votes." His wife said, "He's just been in politics too long to change."

He has had the trappings of power for a long time, the sycophants and the chauffeured car. His friends, his hangers-on, his wife and even Wallace are laying plans for the U.S. Senate race in 1978 — although Wallace worries that the post will not pay enough money.

Wallace never wanted to come to Washington as a senator, his wife said, but that is his only hope for the future now.

As Cornelia Wallace said last week, "He has no other place to go." Washington Post

Humphrey Turns Sights On Senate Leadership

By JULES WITCOVER

It was often said that Hubert Humphrey would do anything for a chance to be president. Last week he proved them wrong.

Faced with the futility and party divisiveness of a challenge to Jimmy Carter for the Democratic nomination at the 11th hour, Humphrey voluntarily bowed out, at age 65, doubtless for the last time.

Declaring that Carter "is virtually certain to be our party's nominee," Humphrey said he "will not authorize any presidential political activity on my behalf" and "will do all I can to help unite our party behind the candidate chosen by the delegates at the convention."

Humphrey said delegates pledged to him are free to vote as they choose.

Social Innovator

Humphrey said he would have more to say later about seeking his party's top Senate leadership post, being vacated by retiring Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana.

To liberals in the party doubtful about the degree of Carter's commitment to causes dear to them, Humphrey remains a voice in party councils for those who believe in government's role as an innovator of social welfare and change.

As a leader, or the leader, of Senate Democrats in a Carter administration, Humphrey would be well-positioned to deal with a president who as a candidate has run consistently against the do-everything Washington that Humphrey over the years has come to personify. Humphrey's preference for the prospect of continued high recognition in the Senate over what would have been his fourth overt bid for the Democratic presidential nomination should have come as no surprise.

He had been saying all along that while he was available for the nomination, he was not going to scramble for it.

But like the boy who cried wolf, Humphrey had coveted the White House so long and so publicly that many found it hard to grasp that he really meant what he said.

Had Carter stumbled on the final primary day, Humphrey might have answered the bell one more time. But Carter did not stumble, and Humphrey can count, so the wisdom of age and experience that many thought would be overruled by his zeal for the presidency prevailed.

The point of no return this year really came not last Tuesday, but six weeks ago, when after much soul-searching and fanfare Humphrey strode into the Senate Caucus Room and elaborately declined to enter the New Jersey primary as an active candidate.

That decision took the wind out of the sails of Democrats in New Jersey and elsewhere who hoped he would move into the anti-Carter breach left by the collapse of Sen. Henry M. Jackson's campaign in the Pennsylvania primary.

Humphrey made his first run for the presidency 16 years ago against John F. Kennedy, losing to him first in Wisconsin and then in West Virginia in the primary that dispelled the notion that a Catholic could not be elected president.

Over the years, in 1964 as the successful vice-presidential nominee, in 1968 as the presidential nominee who lost to Richard Nixon by a whisker and in 1972 when he failed to wrest the nomination from George McGovern, Humphrey remained always the "Happy Warrior" whose zest for campaigning persuaded many he would never pass up an opportunity to run for higher office.

But if his enthusiasm for his pet Liberal causes had not waned, his tolerance for disappointment, and even public ridicule, had dropped perceptibly.

He did not relish the image his own actions had brought him of not only the happy but the hungry warrior. As he settled again into Senate life, he told interviewers he had lost his stomach for the scrambling of politics, especially the fund-raising.

Manager Convicted

He enjoyed being a near-institution on Capitol Hill, and he knew that an active candidacy would resurrect stories about the conviction of his 1972 campaign manager on charges of receiving illegal campaign contributions.

So he elected for 1976 to leave the trenchfighting to younger, less scarred Democrats, and to tend to business in the Senate, but always with a watchful eye for opportunity.

What continued to make the presidency attractive to Humphrey in 1976 was his awareness that the fall campaign was likely to be waged heavily on issues of the economy, the Minnesotan's forte.

There are few men in the Senate who can discuss and debate economics with Humphrey, especially in terms of their impact on working-class America. He spoke often and with relish in private about the opportunities for the Democrats in such a debate with the Republican nominee.

Now that Humphrey has decided not to lend himself to any last-ditch stop-Carter effort, he is free to join that debate from a position of influence and prestige, and also to play a leading role in another task he set for himself at the year's start — to be a vehicle for party unity.

Happy Ever After . . .

russell baker

The further adventures of Cinderella and the Prince as recounted in "The Interminable Happy Ever After:"

The Prince was not amused when, on his arrival home after a hard day at the castle one evening, Cinderella threw her arms around him, kissed him and said, "Guess what! I've got a job."

"That's great," said the Prince, with unconcealed sarcasm.

"You can't take the dictation, you can't type and you can't answer the telephone. Who's going to hire somebody like that?"

But Cinderella was too happy to let her spirits be dampened by this royal wet blanket. "Take off your crown and ermine and sit down in your favorite chair while I bring you a TV dinner and I'll tell you about it," she said.

He despised TV dinners, as he despised liberated women. Moreover, he had serious business on his mind. A beautiful young woman whom he put on the royal payroll despite an utter dearth of clerical skills had just that day threatened to use him as a best seller object.

Brazenly, she had confronted him en route to an audience and announced that she was about to write a book exposing their relationship. "We haven't had any relationship," he said, "and what's more, if you breathe a word of it to some ghost writer, this is where you're likely to end up." With which, he had opened the door to the castle dungeon and shown her a cell without air-conditioning.

"You realize, of course, that I've just taped that threat," said the woman. "It will make juicy reading when serialized in the National Enquirer."

The Prince, who had a heart of gold despite being a male chauvinist swine, gave her a raise of 2,000 ducats and told her to take Friday afternoon off, but he was still worried when Cinderella brought him his tray.

"Next Monday I start working on the staff of the Grand Chamberlain at a salary of 14,000 ducats a year," Cinderella told him.

"The Grand Chamberlain!" exclaimed the Prince. "The chairman of the powerful Royal Administration Committee? But you don't know the first thing about administration."

"Silly Prince," said Cinderella, giving him a wifely kiss on the cheek. "That's the point of the whole job."

"I know what the point is, and I don't like it," the Prince said. "I'm astounded, Cinderella. Astounded! And for a measly 14,000 ducats! Do you realize that after taxes and other government deductions you'd barely be bringing home 10,000 ducats a year?"

"My poor innocent Prince," cooed Cinderella. "No wonder the kingdom is almost bankrupt." And she unfolded the full plan.

After a few months on the Grand Chamberlain's payroll for no visible services, she would retain a ghost writer who would produce a book relating her story of the vicious sexual practices carried on in the offices of the chairman of the powerful Royal Administration Committee.

The Prince was suddenly overwhelmed with tenderness for Cinderella. He took her in his arms. "Darling," he asked, "do you know what sexual practices are?"

"Of course not," said Cinderella, "but I am told that books about them sell extremely well. In fact, I am assured that my own book on the subject may bring in as much as 750,000 ducats in front money, with a possible two million ducat movie sale."

The Prince patted her chastely. His father had warned him against marrying a woman who believed that pumpkins turned into limousines. But his mind was working too busily at state craft now to dwell upon the absurdity of his marriage.

"Tell me, sweet," he said, "who has been instructing you in the vulgarities of the publishing racket?"

"Why," said Cinderella, "he is but a kindly literary agent visiting from over the sea. He wnats to help young women all over the kingdom make fortunes so they can live happily ever after. I am meeting him at noon tomorrow at the Three Martini Luncheon and Tax-Deductible Steak Room."

"I see," said the Prince. That night he made a scrambled phone call to the Royal Bureau of Investigation. Next day at two minutes before noon, a literary agent was arrested as he approached a downtown expense-account eating place. He was tried at 2 p.m. on charges of conspiring to induce women to use men as best seller objects, found guilty at 2:05 p.m., and at 2:07 p.m. was taken to the royal dungeon to begin serving a life sentence.

At 2:30 p.m. the beautiful young woman on the Prince's royal payroll came to the throne room, told the Prince she was unable to reach the man who was to put her in touch with a ghost writer, and asked if he could help. The Prince introduced her to Cinderella and agreed to ghost the recipes himself if they would both collaborate on a cook book.

Five Struggle to Pick Up the Pieces

By JOSEPH STEIN
Washington Post

NEWPORT, Ore. — Five followers of The Two are struggling to pick up the lives they left last September to search for a new life and "a higher level of consciousness."

If excitement was high then — headlines spoke of disappearances, mysticism and riding UFOs to another planet — things are calm now.

Many residents of this coastal resort don't seem to care, but the returnees say they have encountered suspicion.

Three other returnees, all men, declined to discuss in detail their lives.

Dan Staggs called the journey a "traumatic experience," and Ron Greenberg said he and his wife "came back to some hard things."

Robert Rubin, a former landlord, admitted, "I was flipped out and I still would rather have somebody support me, but I have to work for daily bread."

The big change in their lives began when they left Sept. 14 to follow Bonnie Nettles and Herb Applewhite — the couple known as The Two — after renouncing their possessions, even children, and taking rigorous discipline.

They changed names, lived celibate lives with new partners, and traveled extensively through the Southwest in an experience they call "the process."

The Two's philosophy is based upon the renunciation of worldly possessions, relationships with friends and family, use of such stimulants as tobacco and alcohol, and pleasures such as sex.

Travel, which would help break old patterns, is also part of "the process" by which the followers would eventually gain a higher consciousness and inner quiet.

If life for the returnees seems hard now, though, they don't blame The Two.

In fact, they report nothing but good about them and "the process," and rebut criticism of the leaders.

They attribute the criticism to "hysterical people, aroused parents" and misunderstanding by newspaper reporters who "wrote weird, far-out things about us."

"The Two have a mission; they claim to be from the next level of consciousness, and that's where we are going," said Greenberg, 29, who was a commercial fisherman before he joined The Two.

Rubin expressed satisfaction with his experience.

"We are all changing, growing. The Two would be welcome here anytime."

Greenberg's wife, Judy, 20, called it a "deep spiritual experience. I understand more why we are on this earth, and I can relate to people much better than before."

But Judy Greenberg has one of the worst problems faced by the returnees, a complicated legal battle for custody of her two small children, left behind in the care of another woman.

About a week after she left, her former husband got custody of Jennifer, 3, and Noah, 1, with a court order.

Adding to that trouble, they have no money and Greenberg has been unable to find steady work, subsisting on odd jobs and occasional fishing, his former occupation.

"We're back," said Greenberg, "but only on one level. It is hard getting back into the money orientation of this society."

Another returnee, Bob Epperson, 29, who moved here in 1970 from Denver, appears to have more success with readjustment.

When he returned here, Epperson found it hard "to adjust to this society, the way we have to live. For two or three weeks, I couldn't find the energy to do anything. It was like getting out of the service," said the Marine Vietnam veteran.

Before he left, he said, he had trouble making a living by commercial fishing and is now trying to sell his half interest in a dory.

"I used to have a lot of anxiety, could not develop a relationship with the environment, with God."

Epperson does not have that problem now.

"I'm beginning to work things out. I have a temporary job out of town. Things are still tough, though."

Dan Staggs, 44, said he went into deep depression when he returned because of disappointment with "this life."

When he left, he gave up his nursery job, and turned over his house and its contents — worth more than $20,000 — to a casual acquaintance. Now she refuses to let him use the house, even temporarily.

For Rubin, resuming ownership of his property, which provided him with income, came easily.

"I got everything back except a couple of small houses that were returned to real estate men and some vehicles and tools" he said.

"People still come up and tell me 'I got something from your house and why don't you come get it.'"

"The hardest thing" he went on, "was to accept that I'm going to be here as long as I live. Maybe you don't want to believe that."

'FRANKENSTEIN DREAM' THREAT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The scientists want to build a laboratory for advanced genetic research. The city officials fear the result may be "the answer to Dr. Frankenstein's dream."

That's the gist of the argument between Harvard University scientists and Cambridge city officials — a battle between the hunger for scientific knowledge and the fear of the unknown.

What Harvard wants is to build a containment laboratory for unprecedented "recombinant DNA" research — the construction of new life by combining the genes of two existing organisms.

But Cambridge Mayor Alfred Velucci and the nine-member city council fear such research accidentally could contaminate the community's 100,000 residents with microorganisms which could produce new and perhaps undiagnosable diseases.

"We want to be damned sure the people of Cambridge won't be affected by anything that would crawl out of that laboratory," Velucci said Tuesday in announcing a public hearing June 23 on the planned research unit.

Buccaneers Will Press On, Regardless of Weather

We'll press on, unless we're rained right out," said chairman Harold Moist.

The parade at 10:30 a.m. Saturday is, for many people, the biggest event of the three days and if it looks like a heavy rain, organizers will try to get a cancellation message on the radio early enough to warn participants.

"We'll make the decision when the time comes," Moist said.

But there are other features that will go on in any case — the indoor exhibits, tea time, bowling tournament and buccaneer ball.

This year will feature a bigger children's program at Gorge Park Sunday, starting at 10 a.m., with a fishing derby for children 12 and under offering a bicycle and fishing gear for prizes.

Crowning of Barbara Rainsford as Buccaneer Queen leads off Friday's program at 7 p.m. in Esquimalt Sports Centre, with retiring queen Denise Lockett, Mayor Art Young and the Rainbow Sea Cadet band taking part.

A dance for senior citizens, with music by The Columbians, starts at 7:30 in the recreatin centre, but patrons of all ages are welcome.

The Lions Club pancake breakfst from 7 a.m. to noon starts off Saturday's program at the rear of the sports centre, and midway and concession booth open at 10.

The parade route will be along Esquimalt Road from Dominion to Admirals with dispersal to the events at Bullen Park.

MAYOR DEMANDS PAPER APOLOGIZE

On behalf of Victoria city council, Mayor Mike Young has written to the Victorian newspaper demanding a full retraction and apology for a columnist's allegations that one or more aldermen have used their public office to line their pockets.

The item in question appeared in Monday's issue under the columnist's pseudonym, "Starbuck," and was briefly discussed at city council's regular caucus meeting on Tuesday.

Young's letter, despatched before the meeting had even ended, said the comments contained in the article were "obviously intended to demean and discredit every member of my council and to hold them up to contempt in the eyes of your readers."

He said council was seeking advice on possible legal remedies to "vindicate its honor."

The letter said the "total and unequivocal" retraction and apology requested must be given as much prominence as the original article. It concluded: "Furthermore, I intend to know the identity of your columnist Starbuck."

The statements which caused the complaint appeared in an article deploring the high price of land in Canada, and particularly the role played by developers and speculators.

Wrote Starbuck: "There are many examples here in Victoria of promoters and even the odd alderman buying land and then working the municipal council to rezone the land. The price of the property usually doubles or trebles in value. The municipality gets none of the profit, the promoter who has given nothing to the community doubles his money and Ottawa usually gets a good percentage of the promoter's profit by way of taxes."

In an interview following the council meeting the mayor told reporters he believed the public deserves "better reporting than that type of thing."

Without being unduly sensitive, he said, council should consider the possibility of launching a class action in the face of allegations that certain members had "tinkered" with the zoning process to further their own ends.

"I think as politicians . . . we have to understand that people will try to make fools out of us," he added. "But when they try to make criminals out of you, you have to defend yourself."

GOOD RESPONSE

Officials of the department of human resources are pleased at the interest shown in raising handicapped children at a foster information forum on handicapped children held here Tuesday.

"Nine families showed interest in becoming foster parents for handicapped children," Faith Magwood, a worker with the Greater Victoria fostering service, said.

"This is very encouraging," she added. "We pulled no punches. Raising handicapped children is a challenge. But most people who become involved have got it in them to do the job."

Apart from prospective foster parents, the meeting was attended by some foster parents and students.

Aggressors Listed

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The first volume of a new Soviet military encyclopedia has just been published and it lists 29 "imperial aggressors" since the Second World War. Heading the list is Britain with 21 citations and the United States is cited 17 times. Canada is near the bottom of the list, cited as an "aggressor" in the Korean war.

Scrutiny Urged Of Air Fleet

The Socred backbenchers feel the government's 10-plane air fleet could be run more efficiently.

Sam Bawlf (Victoria) and Stephen Rogers (Vancouver South) suggested during a public accounts committee meeting Tuesday that the service should be subjected to closer scrutiny.

Rogers, a commercial airline pilot, said most commercial pilots fly about 75 hours a month, up to a maximum of 125 hours, but the 18 government pilots have about 35 hours of flying time per month along with their other ground duties.

"There is quite a disparity there and I would suggest low utilization of pilot time," Rogers said.

He said 50 to 55 hours would be more efficient.

"We don't need to scrap the service, but we do need to make it more efficient," he said.

The government pilots make about $22,000 a year.

Bawlf said there could be greater efficiency in the air service by maintaining a tighter review of who uses the planes and what for.

Bawlf said this year's budget of $1.6 million for the fleet was small compared to other departments, but "a bite of $1 million here and a bite of $1 million there and we're soon letting millions fly by without adequate accounting."

Constitution Patriation Predicted

OTTAWA (TNS) — Provincial premiers were predicting Tuesday Canada's constitution will be brought to Canada next year, perhaps for a ceremonial burning on Parliament Hill on July 1.

The Queen is scheduled to visit Canada briefly on her 25th anniversary in 1977.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick and Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia both said they felt a growing consensus among first ministers that the time has come to put the British North America Act to rest.

The act, which provides the written part of Canada's constitution, is an act of the British Parliament and rests now in Westminster.

Prime Minister Trudeau also exhibited a new urgency for "patriation" of the constitution as the federal-provincial conference of first ministers ended Tuesday.

After the meeting, he said "Canada is the only country in the world that can't amend its own constitution. In that sense, we are still a colony of Great Britain, on paper and in law."

He said he had written to the premiers giving them options for handling of the constitution and gave them to June to make decisions.

Now, in June, they want until August.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec admitted Trudeau is growing "anxious" about the constitution.

He said his cabinet would devote full attention to the constitution question in August, after the Olympic Games and before the premiers conference in Edmonton late in August.

Has your RRSP Cost you money?

You've had your RRSP for a while, now's the time to look at it in the cold light of day.

First, consider your RRSP as an investment, rather than just as a tax deduction. Did some of it get taken away, right at the beginning, to pay a sales commission? Is it being eaten away by registration fees, administration fees, management fees and termination fees?

How are your RRSP funds invested? Are they dependent on stock market trends?

Once you've looked at your existing RRSP, take a look at ours. We don't charge fees of any kind, and we guarantee a high rate of growth, year after year.

One other thing. In most cases we can transfer your present RRSP to a City Trust Plan quickly and easily, without tax consequences.

Take a look at your RRSP now, then ask about ours, at any City Trust Branch.

Rash of Petroleum Takeovers Loom

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The hunger for petroleum reserves will lead to a round of takeovers of small exploration companies by larger firms in the near future, according to an investment house study.

A report distributed by the Victoria office of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. says high prices for petroleum products have made it more attractive for companies to buy existing reserves rather than to explore for them.

The situation is similar to conditions 10 years ago that resulted in a round of takeovers.

Price increases have been spectacular, especially for natural gas. Established reserves have increased 500 per cent in value since 1970. The value of newly-discovered natural gas has increased 1,000 per cent.

Companies with high cash flows will be the ones most likely to make bids for the smaller companies.

These companies include:

Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas with a cash flow of $130 million being used for exploration and development plus acquisitions of both domestic and foreign companies. It has 12.9 million shares outstanding and a debt of just over $102 million.

PanCanadian Petroleum has a cash flow of $120 million and is understood to be planning an aggressive exploration and takeover program. It has 31.2 million shares outstanding and a debt of $81.4 million.

Dome Petroleum has a cash flow of $90 million and is interested in Canadian junior gas producers. It has 11.2 million shares outstanding and a debt of $239.7 million.

Norcen Energy Resources has a cash flow of $80 million. Past acquisitions include Great Plains. There are 19.4 million shares and a debt of $314 million.

Other companies that may be buying include Aquitaine with a cash flow of $65 million and a debt of $56.3 million, Home Oil with a cash flow of $60 million and a debt of $72.6 million and Canadian Superior Oil with a cash flow of $50 million and no debt.

Pitfield, Mackay, Ross lists 12 companies which may be targets of these takeover bids:

Alberta Eastern Gas, which is a leading producer of shallow gas in southeastern Alberta;

Asamera with an oil production interest in Indonesia;

Bow Valley Industries with a 28 per cent interest in the Brae field. Two other participants in the field have already been taken over;

Canadian Export Gas with gas holdings and exploration land;

Coseka Resources with gas interests in the Alberta foothills;

Ocelot Industries with high pressure gas reserves in the Edson-Peco area. If not taken over, the company itself may expand on the strength of its reserves;

Siebens Oil and Gas has a royalty interest from Hudson's Bay Company and has a small share in the Brae field;

Voyageur Petroleum with good quality Viking gas in Alberta.

LEGION MEMBERS OBJECT TO FRENCH

WINNIPEG (CP) — Complaints about the use of French at the Royal Canadian Legion's annual convention were voiced briefly Tuesday.

The complaints came after an explanation in French of the procedures to be followed for the nomination of officers. There were several calls for translations into other languages, such as Ukrainian and Polish.

One delegate attracted the applause of the convention when he remarked: "We're all Canadians, so let's speak English."

However, a Quebec delegate noted that his province is still a part of Canada, and Canada still has two official languages.

President R. D. McChesney of Kirkland Lake, Ont., later urged legion members to have some sympathy for their comrades from Quebec

Steelmen Strike But Hopes High

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Picket line bonfires built high against a cold wind in this northern Manitoba mining centre Tuesday night signalled the start of a steelworkers' strike ignited by a decision of the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

But it began with the hope that a settlement can be reached soon on the board's reduction of a wage increase negotiated between Inco Ltd. and local 6166 of the United Steelworkers of America.

'Generally, there's high hopes of an early settlement," said Bob Pitt, a picket captain at the main entrance to the nickel mine and smelter.

"But they are basically ready to strike now for what they think is justifiably theirs."

The optimism stems from the impending visit of Donald Tansley, administrator of the anti-inflation program, who was to arrive for meetings with Inco and union officials, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m Thursday.

Three representatives of Tansley's office have been here since Sunday night holding preliminary discussions on the appeal of the wage rollback.

"There have been informal meetings," said Wilf Hudson, the union's area representative.

"The investigators have been trying to establish the exact cost of the contract. They said they are starting with a clean sheet of paper and we have to take our benefits and cost them out all over again."

The three-year contract negotiated with the company offered an 18.1-per-cent total package increase in the first year. But the board initially rolled that back to 12.9 per cent, then adjusted it to 14.9 per cent after a review.

The steelworkers generally go through an annual turnover rate of 129 per cent at the mine and smelter. Many workers already have left the city of 22,000. Others have taken or hope to take other jobs in the area, to support their families until the strike is over.

POOR SOIL BLAMED

Sewage problems at some houses in a subdivision near Esquimalt Lagoon have been caused by failures in the drainage field's soil, the disposal system manufacturer said Tuesday.

Patrick Martin of Northern Purifacation Services Ltd. in Vancouver said 49 of the 68 houses in the subdivision have the cromaglass aerobic treatment systems made by his firm. Such systems employ pumps to break down sewage and then pump effluent into a drainage field which is smaller than ones used with traditional septic tank systems.

Martin said that with one exception, the Esquimalt Lagoon subdivision is the only place where problems have been encountered with cromaglass systems locally. There are 122 systems installed in Greater Victoria.

The Capital Region Board has been examining corrective action after some of the faulty systems were called a health hazard by Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer.

Martin said the problems stem from the soil surrounding the drainage pipes, not the disposal systems themselves.

Funeral Held for Edmonton Boy

EDMONTON (CP) — Funeral services were held Tuesday for Christopher Templar, a 2½-year-old boy whose body was found last Friday in a pond at the bottom of a ravine near his northeast Edmonton home.

The child was reported missing Thursday while the family was having a barbeque. A seven-year-old Edmonton boy has been charged with committing a delinquency in connection with the incident.

The boy appeared in juvenile court Monday and was remanded to June 22 for psychiatric examination. In the meantime, he is being held at the Edmonton detention centre.

At the funeral services at the Christian Reformed Church, the parents—George and Elizabeth Templar — and about 200 mourners prayed for "the other family and the young lad involved in this thing."

There was not trace of bitterness against the seven-year-old boy, and the Templars said they felt sorrow for the boy and his family while mourning the death of their own son.

$200 FINE FOR FALSE ALARM

A Victoria man who pulled a fire alarm as a joke learned Tuesday in Victoria provincial court how expensive his action was when he was fined $200 and given a lecture by Judge William Ostler.

Robert Cesidio Worden, 18, of 252 Gorge East, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of making a false fire alarm late June 5 in the basement of the apartment building where he lives.

Prosecutor Armand Petronio said Worden told police he was leaving the building when he "pulled the alarm as a joke without realizing the consequences at the time."

"Do you really think that this was in the nature of a joke?" Ostler asked Worden.

"I wasn't thinking . . . I just walked by and pulled it," Worden replied.

Did that mean, Ostler asked, Worden didn't realize false fire alarms "cause great alarm to people in the building," cost a lot of money, sometimes lead to accidents involving fire trucks "and people have had heart attacks in buildings because they thought the buildings were on fire?"

In fact, said the judge "many people who pull fire alarms have emotional problems . . . is this the first time you have had the impulse? Because it can be a deep-seated emotional problem."

Worden said there was no such problem and the judge replied, "Sometimes we're not aware of the problem."

Thrifty Homes Still?

It is still the aim of the provincial government to see "moderate or affordable" housing built on a more-than-four-acre property south of Hillside Avenue in Victoria, Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

Curtis told the legislature his department will welcome proposals for development of the Mount Stephen site, either on an ownership or rental basis. And among the groups invited to apply is the Mount Stephen Co-op, whose earlier plan to develop there was killed by the previous government.

The minister was replying to a series of questions from Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) who pointed out last week that the government was proposing to sell the land to developers for more than three times the price it paid the city of Victoria less than two years ago.

The city sold the property to the province for $190,000. Under the housing department's proposal call it is now advertised for $600,000.

Barber said the move was a breach of faith with the city, which felt it had been cheated. But Curtis' statement in the house on Tuesday night included no apologies for the price increase.

He told reporters later he had received no complaints on the matter from Mayor Mike Young or any Victoria residents. The $400,000-plus price increase merely reflected the assessed value of the land, he said.

Curtis said he regretted this escalation in value, but MLAs would agree that "to sell it at far less than the present market value would confer an enormous windfall profit to the new owners. And we are not prepared to do that."

He added that the profits would not go into revenues but into the housing department's revolving fund to provide more housing in Victoria and elsewhere in B.C.

Earlier Tuesday, Victoria's land management committee urged city council to demand that the government produce a clear explanation of what it intends to do with the property, and settle the price question before it proceeds any further.

Ald. Bob Wright said if the government sold the land for $600,000 it could be accused of being a "ripoff developer and rapacious entrepreneur."

City planning director Geoff Greenhalgh pointed out that if the government were to forego the $400,000 profit, the 60 units originally planned for the site would be lowered in price by about $6,600 each.

SLOW DRIVER CRACKDOWN PLANNED

Traffic along the twisty Island Highway and on other provincial roads should flow a little easier this summer — there's going to be a crackdown on slow drivers who hold up other vehicles.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said recently the section of the Motor Vehicle Act that allows for charges against drivers impeding others behind them will be enforced by the RCMP.

Sgt. Murray Brown of the RCMP Victoria subdivision traffic section said Tuesday it was not the intention of police to charge people who drive too slowly but only those who don't pull over to the side and let those who wish to travel faster pass by.

Fraser said as another measure to reduce lineups which lead to passing accidents, the department will increase pull-out areas along highways.

No Drop In Deaths On Island

Reduced speed limits may have been a major factor in decreasing highway deaths in British Columbia as a whole but it doesn't seem to have made much difference on Vancouver Island.

According to Sgt. Murray Brown of the RCMP traffic section, there were just as many fatal accidents (36) and an increase in number killed (42, up from 40) in the first five months this year as the same period in 1974 when the higher speed limits were in effect.

The statistics cover only those parts of the Island serviced by the RCMP and do not include municipalities with their own police forces such as Greater Victoria.

Brown said the year-end tally for 1975 was lower than the 1974 — 77 fatal accidents with 95 deaths, down from 98 and 109 respectively.

The death toll for the province, however, has dropped much more markedly, Brown said. He noted that for the first five months of 1976, there were 155 fatal accidents with 194 deaths compared with 205 fatal accidents and 239 deaths for the same period in 1974.

In some parts of the province, notably the Fraser Valley Freeway, the drop has been dramatic.

Staff-Sgt. Max Hochstetter, RCMP district traffic supervisor on the Lower Mainland, said there hasn't been a single fatality so far this year on the Highway 401 section from Langley to Vancouver. In 1975 six deaths were recorded on this section of highway and in 1974 there were 22.

He said the figures appeared to be clear evidence of the effect of the provincial government decision to lower highway speed limits in late 1974.

"I'd also like to think that good selective enforcement and highway patrols were involved in the accident decrease and the saving of lives," Hochstetter added.

Cyclist Injured In Collision

A 15-year-old Victoria boy was treated and released from Victoria General Hospital Tuesday after his bicycle struck a car on Burnside near Finlayson.

Police said Jagtar Bains of 508 Cecelia received bruises when he rode into a car that was backing out of a driveway onto the road.

Ferry Parking Studied

B.C. Ferry Authority has explored alternative public parking for its jammed-up Swartz Bay terminal but as yet lacks authority to proceed.

Terminal superintendent Frank Ramsay said Transport Minister Jack Davis would consider the question of additional parking, which has been noticeably short since the summer tourist season began and higher ferry rates went into effect June 1.

Part of the problem appears to stem from the fact that more people heading for the mainland are leaving their cars at the terminal rather than driving on board ferries, apparently preferring to ride the bus on the other side than pay doubled automobile tariffs.

But there are only 300 public pay parking spaces available within the terminal property, which Ramsay says falls about 200 spaces short during peak periods.

He said all land now held by the authority at Swartz Bay is committed for terminal purposes and any additional parking area would have to be purchased. At today's prices, the cost could be comparable with constructing tiered parking on the existing lot.

North Saanich Mayor Paul Grieve said he felt 100 additional spaces could be provided on land already held by the authority and that this could be done at relatively low cost.

He suggested this move would take the pressure off nearby roads where parking is illegal and many motorists have found their cars towed away after returning from the mainland.

Grieve puts the onus for more parking on the government and justified the removal of cars parked illegally on narrow intersecting roads just outside the terminal.

He said when cars line the sides of Canoe Cove and Dolphin roads, fire trucks cannot get through readily, and he cites the marinas at the foot of each road as having a high priority in case of emergency.

RCMP concur with the mayor and cite complaints from residents of the two roads when ferry patrons line them with parked cars.

A Sidney resident, John McVie, said there are insufficient signs to warn drivers of the tow-away zones and nothing to tell a motorist who has lost his car where he can find it.

Grieve said the municipality will post signs telling where to locate towed away cars, although he observed such a step is unneccessary in the city where there are dozens of tow-away zones.

Ads to Say B.C. Ferries Now Normal

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government will launch a special advertising campaign immediately to assure tourists the ferries are operating normally, Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf said today.

He said the decision was made by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, who is in charge of the provincial department of travel, and Transport Minister Jack Davis following a meeting between Davis and a delegation of Victoria merchants Tuesday.

The advertising campaign will be centred on the lower mainland but will include Seattle and the interior of B.C. as well.

A second request from the Victoria merchants, that the ferry fares be reduced, was rejected by Davis on the grounds the ferries will lose $25 million this year even if the vessels carry big loads at the present fares.

The advertising campaign will be under way within the next 10 days because the provincial government is aware that Victoria has basically a 100-day tourist season that is already under way.

While there was a need for the advertising campaign, reports that vehicle traffic is down 33 per cent since June 1 have been taken out of context, Bawlf said.

"For the first three or four days of the month there was a concern the ferries may go on strike at any time and the traffic dropped to almost nothing. On some trips you could count the number of cars on one hand.

"Even if the ferries had been operating at 100 per cent in the past few days, the statistics would show a decline because of the first three or four days when the vessels were almost empty."

He said there is evidence traffic is returning to normal patterns.

Bawlf was present at the meeting Tuesday when Davis met a delegation led by Gerry Splatt, general manager of the Royal London Wax Museum.

Splatt today said he was pleased the government has agreed to launch the advertising campaign and said the tourist flow could match last year's levels if it is successful.

Traffic flow on the Marguerite, the Coho and Washington State Ferries is about the same or above last year, he said.

"The big decline had been on the B.C. Ferries.

"If we could solve that problem, we could have a satisfactory year after all."

He said the main resistance to the ferry fare increases would come from nearby areas where people have been paying low rates for 16 years. Now they know the rate has been doubled.

While the delegation would have liked to have seen some action on the question of ferry fares, they were generally pleased with the meeting with Davis, Splatt said.

Meanwhile, Davis today said there was little chance the government would offer free rides to everyone on the B.C. Ferries despite a study of the question under way by Dr. William Hughes, a research director for the provincial transport department.

Davis said Hughes is studying all aspects of the ferry system and all possible fare combinations. But with the service operating at a loss there is little possibility of a reduction or of free rides to foot passengers.

Hughes also told the forum that public resistance to the increase in ferry fares was greater than expected.

Ferry traffic figures reveal about a 33 per cent drop in vehicle traffic in the first 12 days of June.

Davis said today he feels it is still too early to tell the real effect of the fare increases. He said tourist traffic is down across Canada and the drop in tourist trade in B.C. may be simply a reflection of that general slump.

Marguerite Carrying More

Tourist flow on the Marguerite is up slightly from last year and getting stronger every day, an advertising spokesman for the vessel said today.

The Marguerite has carried 11,775 passengers in June, up from 9,466 in the same period last year, said Dave Glover of Truman-Glover Ltd., the company which handles advertising for the vessel.

He said there were 707 passengers aboard the Marguerite Monday, up from 475 on the same day last year. On Tuesday there were 848 passengers, up from 225.

The Marguerite has been carrying a full load of 50 cars on each trip and many have been turned away in Seattle, he said.

The ship has actually carried 20,675 passengers so far this year, but 8,900 came in May with the vessel getting off to an early start.

Glover said B.C. Steamships Ltd., which operates the Marguerite, has been carrying out a vigorous advertising campaign in the Seattle area this spring to counter the stay-home-for-the-bicentennial advertising campaign in Washington State.

Special package deals are also being promoted and this has helped increase the flow of tourists on the Marguerite, he said.

"This increase is significant because we have not yet reached the peak season. From June 20 on, the Marguerite has virtually full loads," he said.

"Any increase before that time is very important because it indicates a growth in the tourist industry for Victoria."

HILL SHOWS NO BITTERNESS

Ald. Dave Hill of Central Saanich said today he is resigning as chairman of the Saanich Peninsula Water Committee without bitterness and in hopes it will speed progress towards solving water problems.

Hill, who remains on the committee, said his main reason for stepping down as chairman is that he has found he was unable to properly look after the needs of his own constituents in Central Saanich.

Because Sidney and North Saanich have differing views on how to meet the peninsula's water needs, he found it difficult on many occasions to reconcile his position as both peninsula and Central Saanich spokesman.

Hill said he favors regional control of water distribution but, unlike North Saanich and Sidney, he is opposed to takeover of the four existing water boards on the peninsula by a "super board."

The peninsula committee includes the members of all water boards and councils. It has been working for about two years to solve the present fragmented water administration and annual summer shortages.

Ald. George Westwood of North Saanich was elected chairman of the peninsula committee at a meeting in Sidney today.

100 Times Makes Fred a Regular, All Right

max low

Dropped in to give a pint of blood last night and I met a man who had "dropped in" 99 times before me.

Fred De Beck was at Red Cross House on Fort Street to donate his 100th pint of blood. But to him it was no big deal.

"It is a big deal, however, to Gerry Savage who, as supervisor, is responsible for organizing between 60 and 70 clinics a year on the Lower Island.

"It's really a tremendous contribution, you know," says Gerry, referring to De Beck's 100-pint effort.

Of course, with higher operating costs and budget cuts hitting the provincial blood bank in Vancouver, the service is stressing the need for getting the maximum number of donors along to each clinic. It has therefore become more vital for each area in B.C. to have a good list of regular donors. And you can't get much more regular than the 100-pinters.

The Red Cross became a little concerned when the number of donors at the last clinics here fell quite a bit below the projected target. But in all it's been a good first half for 1976.

In January, a total of 516 pints of blood were collected at CFB Naden in Esquimalt and that, says Gerry Savage, "is the largest one-day clinic we've ever had."

And in March, the University of Victoria set a record for a three-day clinic with 1,032 pints collected.

(Clinics have been held all this week and the final ones are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on both Thursday and Friday at Newcombe Auditorium. They are aimed primarily at Legislature Buildings staff but are open, of course, to members of the public as well.)

According to Red Cross records, there are seven people on the Island who have given 100 pints or more. Fred De Beck is No. 8.

"We haven't had a 100-pint donor for the last couple of years," says Savage. "But this year, I think there'll be about four."

There is, he says, no restriction on the number of pints of blood one may donate.

"As long as you're between the ages of 18 and 65, it doesn't matter how much you donate," Gerry explains. You do have to wait 90 days between donations, though but as Savage says, you can donate four times a year if you catch it right.

For someone to reach the 100-pint mark, the supervisor says, they pretty well have to be donating every 90 days.

Fred says he's missed a few times, but then, his first donor days go way back to 1939 when he was in high school.

Now aged 54 and a federal civil servant, Fred likes to tell of the time he was rushed into Victoria General Hospital to give blood for an emergency operation.

"I reported to the hospital laboratory and was promptly ushered to a bed and told to roll up my sleeve," he says. "I was surprised to see a man dressed in a sweater and blue jeans carefully scrubbing his hands. Then he came over and started to take blood from my arm.

"My curiosity was roused, now, and I asked him if he was an intern or a lab technician but he replied, 'Oh, I'm none of those.' I started to think he might be the hospital plumber or a custodian when suddenly he said: 'Half an hour ago, I was busy in the garden when I got called in on this emergency case also. I'm Dr. Walther, head pathologist at this hospital.' "

Now Fred's wife and two children — his daughter is training to be a nurse and his son is just finishing high school — are all regular donors.

And will he keep on donating over the 100 mark?

"Sure, I've got no reason to stop," he says with a grin. "I think I've probably got too much blood because I feel better after they've taken some away."

Then Fred De Beck looks serious for a moment.

"You know, it hurts about as much as a mosquito bite. And your blood can be used — so it's much better to be on the giving end than the receiving end."

Fred thanks the volunteers handing out the tea or coffee and cookies afterwards but he confesses there's only one thing he misses from his good old blood donor days gone by.

"When I first started donating blood, they used to give you brandy afterwards," he laughs.

"Now the fringe benefits have gone!"

Native Students Fail, Gardom to Investigate

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has promised to look into the failure of four B.C. Native Indian students enrolled in the law faculty at the University of B.C.

NDP MLA Rosemary Brown (Vancouver Burrard) told Gardom the four students were in first year law under the Legal Studies for Native Peoples Program.

"If all the people in the program fail, the program fails," she said.

Three fellow law students have written to UBC law faculty members, objecting to the failure of the four students.

The students say the native students were failed not because they did not understand the law, but because they did not know how to write exams.

"Their failure at UBC reflects upon the inflexibility of our own law school in dealing with students of different educational backgrounds," the letter says.

The law students say that the faculty should have provided some sort of special tutoring for the native students to familiarize them with exam procedures and ask that the four native students be promoted to second year.

The students say the self-confidence of the native students has been "severely undermined by their experience at law school this past year."

Brown said outside the legislature that the law school must be more flexible in dealing with special situations. She said this year was the first first year of the program and it was a "total loss."

The program is based in Saskatchewan and sends native students with some post secondary education to law schools in their own provinces. All the students in the program go through a preliminary eight weeks of preparation at the University of Saskatchewan law school before they head back to the law schools in their home provinces.

Brown said the protest to faculty from other first-year students has prompted a faculty meeting on Wednesday.

Gardom said it wasn't proper for him to look into examination results, but that he would investigate the general situation.

Home Buying Program Joke —Barrett

The B.C. government's proposal to help low-income earners buy homes is a joke, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett told the legislature Tuesday.

During second-reading debate on the Home Purchase Assistance Act, Barrett said the government is offering assistance to people who want to buy houses which don't exist.

The bill would provide for grants to encourage municipalities to permit higher-density housing.

First-time home buyers purchasing an older home would be eligible for a $5,000 government-guaranteed second mortgage, an increase from the existing $2,500 limit.

A government grant of $500 for the purchase of older homes would be dropped.

Homes worth up to $47,000 would be eligible for assistance under the proposed program.

In his first speech in the ligislature since his win in the June 3 Vancouver East byelection, Barrett said the program won't cost the government a dime because there's no houses in B.C. that cost less than $47,000.

Condominium sales might boom under the legislation creating huge profits for people who sell them for less than $47,000, he said.

Young families in suburban areas will gain nothing from the program, Barrett said. The bill would help to force low-income earners to live in run-down areas.

"What kind of mockery is this bill" Barrett said, "It is jut plain gimmickry."

The government has forced increased living costs on the people "and now you've told them you're going to help them buy a house that isn't available."

Extra RCMP to Guard Hedley

RCMP strength at Princeton will be increased to control vandalism at nearby Hedley, Attorney-General Garde Gardom told the legislature Tuesday.

Gardom asked the B.C. Police Commission to look at the problems in the small town, 135 miles west of Vancouver, after it was reported youths who specialize in vandalism, theft, rock-throwing and threats of violence were harassing elderly Hedley residents.

Gardom said an additional constable has been assigned to Princeton and patrols in Hedley have been stepped up.

An RCMP staff sergeant and a member of the B.C. Police Commission will be doing an in-depth study of Hedley's vandalism problems, he said.

PROPERTY VOTE BILL HAS MIXED REACTION

The B.C. legislature spent little time in debate to give second reading to 10 bills Tuesday, all privarily of a housekeeping nature.

The Municipal Amendment Act, which would restor property owners' rights to vote in municipalities where they don't live, revealed mixed feelings of opposition members.

The amendment would allow people who own property to vote in the municipality where the property is located although they live outside that municipality.

The former New Democratic Party government abolished a property owner's right to vote in civic elections unless he or she lived in the municipality.

Conservative Leader Scott Wallace said it is unfair for a non-resident property owner to have no control over a municipal council which sets the taxes on the person's property.

"The only control an individual can have over a local government is the right to vote," Dr. Wallace said.

Graham Lea (NDP—Prince Rupert) accused the Social Credit government of attempting to attract money from property owners for the next general election campaig as a result of the legislation.

Indians Reorganize

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians has reorganized to form the United Native Nations and has decided to apply for federal core funding, specifically to press land claims. BCANSI rejected federal funding at its first annual meeting last year.

Steel Mill Study Ends in Month

The B.C. government's study of the feasibility of building a major steel mill in the province will be completed in about a month, a spokesman for the economic development department said Tuesday.

Deputy Minister Sandy Peel said in an interview all aspects of the four-part, $1.23-million study will then be wrapped up and recommendations sent to cabinet.

"A study of the proposals, policy-wise, will be done some time over the summer," Peel said.

The former New Democratic Party government had signed an agreement with Nippon Kokan Kaisha of Japan, one of the world's largest steel producers for the study.

After the Social Credit party's victory in the Dec. 11 election, the new government said it was not committed to building the steel mill but would continue with the studies.

Peel said the government now is finishing up with NKK, the studies related to the possibility of establishing a four-million-ton-a-year integrated steel mill.

One phase of that study was the examination of two specific sites — Kitimat on the coast and Prince George in the Central interior—in terms of the social, environmental and economic impact of a steel mill.

Peel said the study also included a look at building a 250,000- to 400,000-ton-a-year direct reduction "mini-mill," discussion with other western provinces, and trade arrangements.

Luxury Ends for Dissenters

By PETER OSNOS
Washington Post

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has moved decisively to restrict financial support from abroad for Soviet citizens — particularly dissenters — and greatly curtail their access to high-quality or imported consumer goods.

With a series of complicated changes in customs and currency regulations over the past year, the Kremlin has plugged one loophole after another whereby modest sums of money from the West could be converted into enough cash to sustain whole families in reasonable comfort — and a few in unusual luxury.

The latest change, which took effect Tuesday, was a sharp increase in the duty charged on many imported items. A fur coat, for instance, will now carry a duty of $150, which is nearly 10 times more than it used to cost.

The revised rules apply to all Soviets and therefore, affect millions of ordinary people whose relatives or friends send them money or parcels as gifts. But the principal target of the changes seems to be dissenters and would-be Jewish emigrants whose political activities prevent them from getting jobs.

They depend almost entirely on remittances from supporters and the impact of the changes has been profound. "This means an end to the help we received from abroad," said a mathematician who has been refused permission to emigrate.

A curious feature in the difficult and frequently dangerous lives of such Jewish activists and prominent dissenters has been their relatively high livng standards. Paradoxically, a consequence of their ostracism from Soviet society was benefits the Kremlin only gives its most highly regarded citizens.

Money they received as gifts from the West was converted into certificates for use in special stores that supply better foods and consumer goods to foreigners — and selected Soviets whose reliability or position entitle them to such coupons.

These beryozka shelves, counters and catalogues make ordinary Russian stores look meagre by comparison. The demand for coupons is so great, therefore, that they could be sold at up to six times their face value.

Hence, a person receiving a gift of $100 had the enviable choice of shopping in beryozkas for himself and his family or selling the coupons — which is technically illegal.

As of last Jan. 1, the money from abroad is only converted into rubles at an official rate of about $1.25 per ruble. Moreover, a hefty handling tax is exacted so the same $100 now produce only about 50 rubles.

That change alone meant a drastic downgrading in living conditions of out-of-work dissenters.

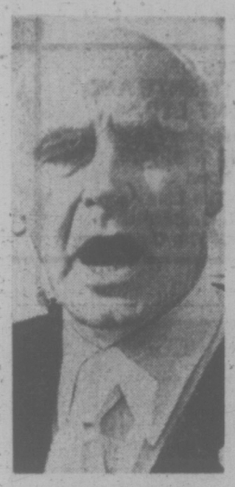
Charley's Baseball Shocker

FINLEY SELLS STARS FOR $3.5 MILLION



CHARLES FINLEY

Baseball Scores On Page 19

By The Associated Press

Charles Finley is $3.5 million richer today, but his once mighty Oakland A's are three more star players poorer and calling it the end of the championship line.

"We don't have much of a team anymore," conceded Sal Bando, an unclaimed item in the biggest one-day sale in baseball history. "But he built it. I guess he has a right to tear it down."

"There's no way those three can be replaced," said Gene Tenace, another survivor of the Tuesday night housecleaning in which Finley peddled left fielder Joe Rudi, relief pitching star Rollie Fingers and lefthanded starter Vida Blue.

Rudi and Fingers were sold for $1 million each, moving from the Oakland clubhouse to the Boston locker room two hours before the game against the Red Sox, which the A's won 3-2 on the strength of Tenace's two home runs, including one leading off the bottom of the ninth inning.

Finley said Blue went to New York Yankees for $1.5 million. Just before baseball's midnight trading deadline, the Yankees acquired Ken Holtzman in a nine-player deal with Baltimore, thereby reuniting the A's former pitching big three of Jim (Catfish) Hunter, Blue and Holtzman.

In the Orioles-Yankees trade, New York sent Rudy May, Rick Dempsey, Tippy Martinez, Scott MacGregor and Canadian pitcher Dave Pagan of Nipawin, Sask., to Baltimore in exchange for Holtzman, Doyle Alexander, Grant Jackson and Elrod Hendricks.

In a National League trade, Los Angeles Dodgers obtained slugger Reggie Smith from St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for outfielder-catcher Joe Ferguson and two minor league players.

Rudi, Fingers and Blue were among the seven unsigned players on the A's roster, and Finley said: "I made every effort to sign them, but when it got down to the last day, I had no alternatives."

When asked what he was left with, besides cash, Finley replied: "I don't even want to talk about that."

He sounded like a beaten man, one who had lost $3.5 million rather than gaining that amount. But later in the evening he vowed: "I'll rebuild. I'm going to use the money to buy players and I'm going to do it immediately."

None of it was spent before midnight, however, and the A's looked like "a solid fifth-place club," in one player's opinion. And that's where they stand, 11 games behind leading Kansas City, in the American League West race they've won the last five seasons.

Bando, Tenace and shortstop Bert Campaneris are the only remaining front-line players from the team that won world championships in 1972-73-74.

Hunter was the first to go, being declared a free agent after the 1974 season on the grounds Finley had breached his $100,000-a-year contract. Second baseman Dick Green retired, predicting correctly that the A's couldn't win another title without Hunter.

A few days before this season began, Finley traded slugger Reggie Jackson and Holtzman, both unsigned, to Baltimore for pitcher Mike Torrez, first baseman-outfielder Don Baylor and pitcher Paul Mitchell. Baylor is unsigned, as are Bando, Campaneris and Tenace, so could play out his option this year and move next spring.

"I can't see any reason to sign now," said Tenace.

Bando said: "I was shocked more than anything over the fact he took money instead of players. But he might have financial problems we don't know about."

And, shaking his head, he added: "He got $3.5 million for just three guys. They're paying $9 million for the new expansion teams."

Fingers, who along with Rudi was given a night off by Boston manager Darrell Johnson, said: "It will be interesting to see how Charlie spends the money."

The reliever said he talked by telephone to Finley, who conducted the sale from his Chicago office, "and he told me he felt like he was losing a couple of his own kids because we'd been in the organization so long but that he had no choice, that's the way it is in this business."

Boogie, Boogie for Joe After Foe Snuffs Smoke

His concerned manager, Eddie Futch, rushed to the apron and whispered into the ear of referee Harold Valac. "Stop it we've had enough."

Valac obliged. The time was 2:26 of the fifth round, even at that more than twice as long as Smokin' Joe lasted in Kingston, Jamaica on Jan. 22, 1973, when Foreman, a 3-to-1 underdog, floored him six times before wrestling the championship from him in less than two rounds.

"I wanted to keep fighting," Frazier said after Tuesday's defeat, which ended his ring career. "I begged Eddie to let me go on but Edddie always knows best."

About 45 minutes after the fight had ended and the crowd had poured out of the Long Island arena, Frazier emerged from his dressing room, a patch covering a stitching job over his right eye, and announced.

"I guess it's time to hang the gloves on the wall ..... From now on, it's boogie, boogie, boogie."

Both he and Foreman were guaranteed $1 million for the fight.

Foreman, an awesome giant with deadly hitting power, is now intent on reclaiming the world crown he lost to Muhammad Ali in Zaire on Oct. 30, 1974.

It's the only fight Foreman has ever lost, and he admits the memory of it tears away at his innards.

"The man I want, and I think I deserve to get, is Muhammad Ali."

After Ali's $6-million burlesque act against wrestler Antonio Anoki in Tokyo on June 25, the heavyweight king has a Sept. 28 date at Yankee Stadium with an old adversary, Ken Norton, who has split two decisions with Ali, once breaking his jaw.

Ali now is 34 and beginning to show signs of advancing age. Assuming he gets by Norton and doesn't retire, it is unlikely he could duck the rejuvenated Foreman without following Frazier's path into retirement.

After winning the world heavyweight crown from Frazier, Foreman fell victim to some bad advice, and his career went into a tailspin. Although he crushed Norton in Caracas, he put on an abominable showing against Ali, and barely beat Ron Lyle in a knockdown, drag-out battle earlier this year in Las Vegas.

Foreman acknowledged that under the guidance of veteran trainer Gil Clancy he is a new man.

"I got advice from my corner, but I did it my way," he said.

That he did. From the first bell, Foreman stalked his man as an animal might his prey, never taking a backward step.

While Frazier snorted and puffed, danced and ducked, employing tactics that were foreign to his style, Foreman measured him solemnly and lashed out with those jolting lefts and rocking rights.

Frazier's only good round was the second, which he might have won on a charitable scorecoard. But Foreman shed his looping left hooks, and then, when the time came, moved in for the kill.

Foreman paid his victim the highest tribute.

"Joe is a great fighter," he said. "He showed me more guts than I ever saw in a fighter before. I never thought he could change his style but he did. He hurt me once, in the second round with a left hook."

Alexander's Red-Hot Pace Ignites Bakers

Alexander had the biggest night, parlaying an excellent display of shooting into eight goals and three assists before a crowd of 1,150 fans — the largest attendance of the season.

The effort boosted his league-leading totals to 50 goals, 58 assists and 108 points in 13 games.

Roadrunners, who have won only two games in 11 starts, stayed in the game most of the way despite losing Joe Marrello and Len Ciminelli, who were ejected midway through the first period with game misconducts. The visiting club battled back from a four-goal deficit after the first period to tie the score 8-8 just after the midway point in the second frame.

With about two seconds left on the clock and Richmond playing a man short, Alexander stopped near the centre line, glanced up at the clock and whipped off an underhand shot which went by the Roadrunner goalie just as the buzzer sounded.

Cool, who is running second to Alexander in the scoring race, pushed his totals to 36 goals and 51 assists for 87 points with a three and four production.

Kevin Kennedy, Gerry Cadwallader, Joe Mottishaw, Dave Lowden, Jim Boyd, Ross McKinstry and Ken King added single tallies to the Victoria total.

Tim Kelly set the pace for Richmond with four goals and three assists while Rico Bellusci, Lindsay Nord and Davinder Deol each scored twice and singles were cintributed by Gord Quilty, Ron Frame, Dave Edinger, Ian Clearie and Fred Plumb.

Recent Outdoor Books Could Be Life Savers

With Father's Day just around the corner, two recently-published books might make a welcome and complementary addition to an outdoorsman's library.

One, entitled Wilderness Survival, has been put out by the B.C. Forest Service and is available for free at any ranger station or from the information division office in Victoria.

The other, Food Plants of British Columbia Indians (Part I — Coastal Peoples), is another in the excellent series of handbooks put out by the provincial museum and costs $4.

Together, they offer a wealth of information that could make the difference between life and death in an emergency situation.

But they can also stand on their own merits.

The forest service publication, which took Garth Coward almost a year to put together, is the first one to combine all the essentials into a size (four by seven inches) suitable for inclusion in a survival kit.

Included in the manual, which is profusely illustrated with pen and ink drawings, are sections on survival psychology, clothing and equipment, travel, wilderness navigation, hypothermia, fire-building, erecting a shelter in both summer and winter situations, locating food and water (including an excellent presentation on edible and poisonous plants), hunting and fishig, signalling rescue aircraft as well as health and first aid.

The book admits to containing "little originality" and most of the information has been gleaned from other publications. But no other publication I've come across can match it for scope.

As the book says in the section on survival psychology:

"The main objective of wilderness survival is to be mentally and physically prepared to survive, should the need for such action arise.

"The most dangerous position you can take is the one most frequently encountered: 'it can't happen to me'."

Given the ever-greater number of people taking to the wilderness to satisfy their recreational needs, it seems only logical to assume that the chances of a tragedy occurring will also increase.

Perhaps this book will play a part in reversing that trend.

Nancy Turner's book on the food plants of our native peoples can also be applied in an emergency situation.

But aside from that aspect, it also provides an insight into ways of harvesting, preserving and preparing many of our wilderness foods that is lacking or sketchy in other presentations.

In several cases the author gives the reason behind a particular characteristic of a wilderness food.

For instance, several other presentations mention the pepper-like taste of skunk cabbage roots, which can be used as food. This book, however, contains a detailed warning.

"Skunk cabbage, like many other members of the Arum family, contains long, sharp crystals of calcium oxalate, which, if taken into the mouth, become embedded in the mucous membranes and provoke intense irritation and burning. Prolonged cooking and storage eliminates these crystals, but the roots should never be eaten raw."

COURT ORDER DELAYS MOVE

BUFFALO (AP) — A federal judge issued a temporary restraining order Tuesday to prevent the National Basketball Association from approving the transfer of the Braves franchise out of Buffalo. U.S. District Court Judge John T. Elfvin issued the order pending a hearing Friday on the City of Buffalo's request for a temporary injunction against the NBA. The city filed two lawsuits Tuesday to try to head off an announced move of the Braves to Hollywood, Fla.

Davies Dazzles For Barbarians

MONTREAL (CP) — Gareth Davies dazzled Quebec Selects with a 35-point game Tuesday night to lead the touring Barbarians to a 75-9 victory in exhibition rugby action. Davies, an outside-half with Cardiff at home in Britain, scored three tries and kicked 10 conversions and a penalty goal as the Barbarians ran roughshod over a North American team for the seventh straight time on their current tour.

THOSE BANTAM GIRLS LOVE TO RUN FAST

Girls of bantam-division age obviously love to run. And they prefer to run fast.

Sprinters among the bantam girls have been the most eager with entries for the annual Y-Times track and field meet that goes Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

Once again, organizers of the age-class and open meet have been deluged with entries. This time there will be athletes representing 35 clubs in Washington, Alberta and British Columbia.

While the number of individual athletes won't quite reach last year's record total of 1,036, it is just around the 1,000 mark, again making the Y-Times fiesta the largest track competition in the Pacific Northwest.

Designed to provide development opportunities for potential stars of future years, the meet will consist of 154 events, with age-class competition for girls and boys in "A" and "B" division and a limited number of open and veterans' events.

Busiest of the bunch will be the young ladies in the bantam-division dashes. There are enough of them entered in the 200 metres that eight heats will be required in the first round of eliminations.

All events are filled and the Richmond Track and Field Club, winner of the team championship last year, has entrants in most of them in a bid to retain the crown.

Action at Centennial Stadium starts at 10 a.m. Saturday, continuing until about 8:45 p.m. On Sunday, competition will get under way at 9:30 a.m. and wind up with a free-wheeling flurry of relay finals around 4 p.m.

Sellout Crowd Watches Burrards' Overtime Spree

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Burrards scored all seven overtime goals as they defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies, 20-13, Tuesday night in a Western Lacrosse Association game before a sellout crowd of 2370.

Dave Wilfong sent the game into overtime when he scored for the Salmonbellies at 15:56 of the third period.

Ward Sanderson broke the tie at 65 seconds of the 10-minute overtime period and the Burrards added six more goals while netminder Dave Evans blanked New Westminster.

The win moved the Burrards to within six points of first-place Victoria Shamrocks. The loss left the Salmonbellies tied for last place with Coquitlam Adanacs.

Bob Salt led the Vancouver marksmen with four goals, including the 400th of his WLA career. Gord Fredericksen and Ron Pinder each added three goals and Bill Rawson, Doug Hayes and Pat Differ contributed two goals each. Bill Foote, Taki Vohalis and Brian Davidson were the other goalgetters.

Brian Tasker scored three times and Keith Scott twice for the Salmonbellies. Single goals came from Walt Weaver, Don Brown, Bill Mosdell, Wayne Goss, Jan Magee, Chuck Medhurst and Bob Tasker.

Vancouver led 4-2 after the first period and New Westminster was ahead 9-6 after the second.

Purdue Import Quits Lion Camp

PENTICTON (CP) — Tight-end Barry Santini of Purdue University walked out of the British Columbia training camp Tuesday, leaving the Lions with 65 players competing for 32 roster positions with the Canadian Football League club.

Santini was running behind another rookie import tight end, Mereed Solis of West Texas State, when he departed, team officials said.

Head coach Cal Murphy committed the team to an import tight end when veteran Tony Moro was not invited to return for the 1976 season. Moro held the position the last two years.

Offensive guard Bill Norton, a Canadian rookie from Weber State worked out for the first time since signing Monday. Norton missed the first four days of camp—three days in New Westminster and one here—because of a contract hassle with general manager Bob Ackles.

Murphy spent considerable time with three rookie Canadian place-kickers — Lui Passaglia of Simon Fraser University, Ed Murray of Victoria and Ed Thomas of Vancouver — in Tuesday's two workouts. A fourth kicker, veteran guard Brian Berg, was sidelined because of a leg injury.

ADANAC PLAYER SUSPENDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mike Mitzel of Coquitlam Adanacs of the Western Lacrosse Association was suspended Tuesday for the club's next two games against Vancouver Burrards.

League commissioner Roy Burton said that Mitzel was suspended for his part in a bench-clearing second-period incident Saturday in Coquitlam. Burton said Mitzel left his bench to become involved in a fight with a Vancouver player on the floor. The action prompted both benches to empty.

Burton said that any similar incidents in future will bring an automatic $500 fine against each club involved.

Rain Postpones Indoor Baseball

HOUSTON (AP) — Astrodome officials said the first-ever postponement of an indoor major league baseball game occurred Tuesday night when the scheduled National League game between Houston Astros and Pittsburgh Pirates was postponed because of high water.

While the Astrodome itself was dry and the players were in uniform, high water around the structure from heavy rains prevented fans from arriving.

An Astrodome official said about 15 or 20 persons were in the stadium "mostly employees who couldn't get home, when the decision was made to postpone the contest.

"Players from both teams were stranded at the Dome and tables were set on the field to feed them."

The game umpires and most of the Astrodome staff were unable to reach the ball park because of the flooding conditions.

The spokesman said the main reason for the postponement was for the safety and convenience of the fans and employees.

The game will be rescheduled at a later date in August.

TOURNAMENT ADDED

DALLAS (AP) — World Championship of Tennis officials have announced that a Tournament of Champions will be added to the 1977 WCT schedule.

Ring Team Selected

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's Olympic boxing team will consist of eight entrants instead of the 11-man squad sought by the Canadian Amateur boxing Association, Maurice Allan, chef d'mission for the Canadian Olympic team, has announced.

Allan said that when the Canadian Olympic Association selection committee asked the CABA to indicate the size of its projected team last December, the boxing body had replied that if it could get six fighters on the team it would be happy.

Selected were: flyweight Ian Clyde of Montreal; featherweight Camille Huard of Quebec; light-middleweight Michael Provost of Montreal; light-welterweight Chris Clarke of Halifax; flyweight Chris Ius of Vancouver; welterweight Carmen Rinke of Lundbeck, Alta. and light-flyweight Sid McKnight of Prince George.

In addition, Cleveland Denny, three-time Canadian lightweight champion, was given COA approval. But Denny, now living in Montreal, still must get clearance from his native Guyana before he will be allowed to compete for Canada.

Cougars Now in Division With Americans, Hawks

BRANDON — The board of governors of the Western Canada Hockey League voted Tuesday in favor of allowing Winnipeg Clubs to move to Spokane, Wash., for the 1976-77 season.

WCHL president Ed Chynoweth said the move is contingent on approval from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the U.S. Amateur Hockey Association.

The franchise shift, approved by the governors at its annual meeting, required approval from eight of the league's 12 teams. The team is to be called the Spokane Americans.

Spokane city council voted Monday in favor of awarding a WCHL franchise 36 playing dates at the city's arena for the coming season.

The Winnipeg franchise has been faced with an increasing decline in attendance since the World Hockey Association was created four years ago and the Winnipeg Jets became the prime tenants of the Winnipeg arena.

The move follows the shift last week of the WCHL's Edmonton franchise to Portland.

Earlier Tuesday, Tom Hodges, president, coach and general manager of the Spokane Flyers of the Western International League said there is a "50-50" chance legal action may be taken to prevent the Winnipeg franchise from moving to Spokane.

Hodges said the Flyers have a contract for "exclusive rights" to the city's arena.

In other WCHL business Tuesday, the board of governors announced changes in the number of teams in each of its two divisions. Five teams will play in the Eastern Division and seven in the Western Division.

The Western Division teams are to be Spokane Americans, Portland Winter Hawks, Victoria Cougars, New Westminster Bruins and Kamloops Chiefs.

Eastern Division teams include Calgary Centennials, Medicine Hat Tigers, Lethbridge Broncos, Regina Pats, Saskatoon Blades, Brandon Wheat Kings and Flin Flon Bombers.

The top four teams in the west and first six teams in the east will qualify for the playoffs, the league said, leaving the last two teams in each division out of post-season activity.

The league also announced two more games have been added to the regular season schedule to bring the total to 74.

On Monday, the league announced a four-team tournament, with one team from the Soviet Union, in Alberta next winter.

The teams, in addition to the Russian entry, will be all-star squads from the Quebec Junior Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey Association and the W.C.H.L.

The tournament, to run from Dec. 26 to Jan. 2, will be a double-round-robin event, with four games in Edmonton, four in Calgary, two in Medicine Hat and two in Lethbridge.

Pele Charisma Produces Boost in Soccer Crowds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than halfway through its 240-game schedule, the North American Soccer League has shot past the one million mark in attendance, an increase of 288,399 from the same time last year. The unofficial figures after last Saturday's games suggest that sports fans in the United States are beginning to support professional soccer.

The 1976 figures follow a record 1975 attendance for the 10-year-old league when more than 1.8 million fans turned out. This season, unofficially 1,007,986 fans have paid to watch 100 games compared with 719,587 after the same number of games in 1975. The average attendance per game in the 20-team league unofficially was 7195 in 1975 compared with 10,079 this year. Continuing at that rate, NASL attendance could pass 2.5 million this year.

Siv American cities are behind last year's total attendance thus far, three of them down significantly: Philadelphia down 30,000; Washington, D.C. 17,000; Miami 12,000; Boston 3,000, Chicago 2,000 and Los Angeles 700.

Toronto Metros-Croatia and Vancouver Whitecaps both have experienced slight drops.

The remaining 12 American franchises show increases.

Minnesota Kicks and Portland Timbers show the largest gains. Minnesota is up 76,079 after five home games, up an average of 15,216 per game, Portland's figures are 65,485, up an average of 16,372 per game after four home games last year.

San Jose, where the Earthquakes operated at 95 per cent of stadium capacity in 1975, have a modest increase. So do the Hartford and San Antonio teams.

The Kicks are the surprise of the '76 season, They took over the Denver franchise which folded after the 1975 season and currently hold the NASL single-game attendance record of 46,164. Another first-year team, San Diego, once the Baltimore Comets, is up more than 2,158 fans per game compared with last year's figures in Baltimore.

The Catalyst has been the skill and charisma of 35-year-old foreign folk-hero Pele, the popular Brazilian who dominated soccer abroad and now plays for New York. Attendance records are set wherever he plays.

Three Former Champs Remain in Title Race

Only three former winners remained in the running after Doreen Brunsdon of Royal Colwood came up with a major upset Tuesday in the opening round of match play in the Victoria and District women's amateur golf championship at the Uplands course.

Mrs. Brunsdon, runner-up in the consolation event last year, eliminated former-champion Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale, 5 and 4.

"I had a few putts drop early in the match and that made the difference," said Mrs. Brunsdon.

Defending-champion Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge Vale and former-champions Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows and Joan Lawson of Uplands collected victories to advance to the quarter-final round scheduled for today.

Mrs. DeGirolamo topped Edna Wondra of Royal Colwood 6 and 4, Miss Shaw ousted Gert Pumfrey of Gorge Vale 8 and 6 and Mrs. Lawson tripped clubmate Heather Stewart, 5 and 3.

In other championship matches, Florence Chapman of Royal Colwood defeated Marg McGowan of Metchosin 6 and 5, Bernice Breffitt of Uplands downed Terese Todd of Royal Colwood 2 and 1, Diane Phillips of Uplands eliminated Kay Woodland of Cedar hill 8 and 7 and Maureen Hibberson of the host club had to go to the 19th to edge Jean Smith of Gorge Vale.

Tournament officials announced Tuesday that Edith Fidler of Victoria Golf Club and Irene Nyberg of Broome Hill, on the basis of handicap scores recorded in Monday's qualifying round, have qualified to represent Zone One in the Canadian handicap award competition at Williams Lake, Aug. 24-25.

Lucille Rates as Threat For Olympic Archery Gold

"I think the chances of her winning an Olympic medal are very good. I think it will be luck that will retermine whether she'll be first or second.

"When it comes to a gold, there's always a bit of luck involved."

With those words, Canadian archery coach Leonard Brisson assessed the potential of Lucille Lessard of Loretteville, Que., who will be in Victoria for the combined Canadian championships and Olympic Games trials, starting Saturday at St. Michael's University School.

Brisson should know.

Miss Lessard was in his high school Latin class when he suggested she take up the sport of archery in 1971 at the age of 14.

With only three years of training behind her, Miss Lessard burst into national and international prominence in 1974 with victories in Quebec, Pacific Coast, Canadian and world championships. In the process, she set a world record in the 18-metre indoor round.

Miss Lessard, now 19, is currently ranked sixth in the world and has the knack of applying her superior powers of concentration under pressure.

"In fact," said national team manager Gord Mitchell, "she does even better under pressure. That's what makes the difference."

Miss Lessard professes never to think about medals.

"I want to shoot a good score," she says. "That's all I want. If I shoot well, then I'm happy."

Other top contenders for berths on the four-member Olympic team — two men and two women — include, Wanda Allan and Gerri Cosgrove, both of Victoria; Danielle Desnoyers, also of Loretteville; Ron Lippert of Kitchener, who is ranked eighth in the world; Wayne Pullen of Dorchester, Ont.; Dave Ball of Victoria and Don Warren of Haney, holder of many national records.

Also at stake in the four-day competition are berths on the team of four women and four men that will represent Canada at the Championship of the Americas shoot at Valley Forge, Pa., in August and the world championships in Canberra, Australia, next year.

Competition will continue through Tuesday with events getting underway at 9 a.m. and winding up at 3:30 p.m. each day.

Cricket Side Selected

John Schofield of Alcos has been selected to captain the Victoria and District Cricket Association representative side which will attempt to regain the Virtue Cup in a two-day match against Vancouver Reps Saturday and Sunday at Vancouver's Brockton Oval.

Other players named to the team are Steve Hanson and Mark Hillis of Alcos; Malcolm Shanks and Alec Porter of Albion; Jan Aten and Kortwright Richards of Oak Bay; Eric Kjekstad of Incogs; Howard Martin and Tim Lord of Cowichan; and Wallace Tait of Castaways.

SWEDES BALKING

HAMILTON (CP) — The Spectator says Swedish hockey players employed by North American professional teams are threatening to boycott their country's Canada Cup team.

The Canada Cup is an international invitational tournament to be played in Canada in September with teams from Sweden, Finland, Czechoslovakia, Canada, the United States and the Soviet Union.

Swedish natives such as defenceman Borje Salming of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs and Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg of the World Hockey Association Winnipeg Jets are expected to join the Swedish team.

But The Spectator said in Tuesday's editions that the players have threatened to stay off the Canada Cup team unless Thommy and Christer Abrahamsson, twin brothers with the WHA New England Whalers, are also allowed to join.

The newspaper said the Swedish Amateur Hockey Federation is refusing to accept the Abrahamsons because New England has not paid compensation demanded for signing the two.

France Defeats Canadian Squad

HALIFAX (CP) — A last-minute comeback attempt failed when time ran out on the Canadian women's Olympic basketball team Tuesday and the French national team came away from its second match against Canada's team with a 76-70 victory.

HOW TO MIX A HORSESHOT

Its name not withstanding, the Horseshot is not a case for the veterinarian, but rather a mixed drink of the Smirnoff school, a sort of Bloody Mary with the extra flavour kick of horse radish.

But the Horseshot is no second runner. With a charm and nip all its own, this great red beauty can keep up with the best of them.

To make a Horseshot, pour 1½ oz. Smirnoff into a tall glass with ice, fill with tomato juice, add horse radish to taste and stir. Sip slowly.

Two More Sailing Spots Filled

Colin Park, a Vancouver native living in Midland, Mich., took the 470 class, turning in his fifth win of the regatta. Allan Leibel of Toronto won in the Tempest class. His second-place finish Tuesday gave him an unbeatable point standing.

Park, 32, and his crew, 23-year-old Jay Cross of Toronto, demonstrated strong sailing all week against what Park called one of the best 470 fleets Canada has ever produced.

For Leibel, 30, the Olympics trip is nothing new. He crewed on a dragon at Kiel in 1972 and finished ninth in a field of 23. His cousin, Lorne Leibel, 26, is crewing for him and is an olympic novice.

Tuesday's results leave only two openings on the Olympic team, in the soling and Finn classes, the largest and smallest classes respectively.

In the Soling, Glen Dexter of Bedford, N.S., holds a slim lead over Peter Hall of Montreal, who in turn is only marginally ahead of Toronto's David Johnson.

Racing ends today.

On Monday, positions on the Canadian team were clinched by two Ontario sailors.

Larry Woods of Winona turned in his seventh win in eight starts to easily top the Tornado class.

Final position of Bob Lewis of Victoria in the Flying Dutchman event was not reported. Lewis was holding down fourth place over-all after four races.

Meanwhile, in Sidney Association play Tuesday night, Victoria Chiefs collected their second victory of the season by upsetting front-running Seaboard Properties 7-6 at Sanscha Park.

All other softball action in the Greater Victoria area was postponed because of wet conditions.

Oilers Offer Post to Guidolin

EDMONTON (CP) — Bep Guidolin, a former National Hockey League coach, has confirmed that he has been offered a coaching job with Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association.

Guidolin, former coach of Kansas City Scouts and Boston Bruins in the NHL, said he will consider moving to Edmonton only if he is hired as both coach and general manager of if he is hired as coach and a close friend is hired as general manager.

I can handle both the coaching and general manager's job," Guidolin said in a telephone interview from his Barry, Ont., home. "But I don't want somebody hanging over my back second guessing my decisions. I don't want to be the fall guy like I was in Kansas City."

Give your family our best.

Local Radio Pays Off

By PAULINE COUTURE

MONTREAL (CP) — There is an excellent half-hour of jazz every day and you can listen to programming in five languages, but only if you live within a two-or three-mile radius of CINQ-FM.

In an experimental decision, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) agreed to license Radio Centre-Ville to begin broadcasting in January, 1975, on the frequency of 99.3 megahertz with an effective radiated power of 7.2 watts.

In order to grasp the significance of such a CRTC decision, it is only necessary to realize that it is not unusual for large urban radio stations to broadcast at 50,00 watts.

Radio Centre-Ville, then, is an experiment in community radio within part of an urban centre. Its present territory has a population of about 200,000, which is larger than many Canadian cities.

If the CRTC grants the station a requested power boost to 36 watts this year, the potential audience will rise to 500,000.

CINQ's staff, who began operations nearly five years ago as a community information centre funded by Opportunities for Youth and the Local Initiatives Program, are young, enthusiastic, and certainly not in it for the money.

One of the issues to be raised at a recent staff meeting was whether or not the station could afford to raise the pay of its permanent staffers to $140 a week from $125.

"The fact that we earn the minimum wage is very appropriate," says Francois Martel, one of three French-language programmers.

"It puts us in the same boat as many of our listeners."

The population of centre-town Montreal does include a great number of people who earn the minimum wage, are unemployed or are on welfare.

Many are immigrants, unfamiliar with Canadian life and eager for the kind of information the station can give them.

"We work mainly through community groups," says Kevin Cohalen, one of the station's administrators and an English-language programmer.

"And we've certainly come a long way. Now they come to us to participate in our programming."

The groups cover a wide range of interests, from food co-ops to community health and legal clinics to women's groups.

Until now, the station has depended for financing on government subsidies, Centraide—an organization of Montreal charities—and the Canada Council.

A June 27, 1975 CRTC decision to allow the station to run non-promotional local advertising may lead to greater financial self-sufficiency.

The station broadcasts about 12 hours a day, six days a week.

"We give ourselves Saturday off," says Mr. Cohalen.

The community station's greatest impact, he says, has been felt in the Greek and Portuguese communities, where listening rates are as high as 80 per cent.

This may be especially attractive to ethnic advertisers.

They can choose from three hours a week of Spanish programming, or seven hours of English programming.

French programming provides 65 per cent of the schedule, thus complying with the CRTC's wish that the station's makeup reflect the linguistic and cultural balance of the community which it serves.

That programming encourages round tables, discussions, interviews; in short, the participation of all community interest groups who can help inform the community and help them make better use of its own resources.

A group of former prisoners, unemployment insurance and welfare guidance, advice on immigration, housing and consumer information: all these are part of CINQ.

The CRTC is watching CINQ, which received its licence on condition that it would be returned and non-negotiable if the station did not obtain the necessary community support to survive.

In October, 1974, Joan Irwin wrote in the Montreal Gazette:

"If you don't live in the St. Louis-Milton Park area you won't be able to hear them. But they'll be there helping the community of old people, newto-Canada people and lost people to know each other and to cope with life in the big lonely city.

CINQ's licence comes up for renewal before the CRTC in September.

City Always Glum In Bargaining—IAF

EVIDENCE CHALLENGE DEFERRED

A defence motion of no evidence based on lack of jurisdiction will be dealt with June 28 when trial of a 30-year-old Victoria man accused of two counts of indecent assault is continued.

Don Farquhar, counsel for Kenneth Roy Black, 2264 Marlene, told Judge E. J. C. Stewart at the conclusion of the Crown's case that no evidence was presented that the alleged offences occurred in the city of Victoria and the county of Victoria.

Crown counsel Richard Law said one witness established jurisdiction for the Royal Jubilee Hospital and he believed jurisdiction was also established for the Eric Martin Institute.

Judge Stewart said Law could check transcripts before June 28 and, if necessary, he could apply to re-open his case.

Bulk of testimony Tuesday was taken up by the complainant, a 15-year-old girl.

Her testimony cannot be published or broadcast because of an order made by Judge Stewart at the request of Law under a new amendment to the Criminal Code.

The amendment states that the presiding judge 'shall, if application therefor is made by the prosecutor, make an order directing that the identity of the complainant and her evidence taken in the proceedings shall not be published in any newspaper or broadcast."

Court has been told by witnesses other than the complainant that the alleged incidents occurred Set. 3 and 4 at the hospital where Black is employed as a technician.

When trial resumes, the defence is expected to call evidence.

Arbitration chairman John Davie was given a gloomy view of the city's bargaining position when dealing with fire-fighters in the fourth day Tuesday of contract settlement proceedings.

"The city's position never changes. It goes from bad to worse and goes to terrbile," said Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria local of International Association of Fire-fighters.

The union leader was being cross-examined by Carl Anselm, head negotiator for the city, who asked about the first bargaining meeting between the sides and whether fire-fighters then agreed to abide by the federal anti-inflation guidelines relating to wages.

Cameron said there was agreement without prejudice, depending on what position the city would take, and Anselm then asked if the city's position had changed.

Cameron said pre-arbitration efforts to reach a negotiated settlement ended when the city passed a resolution stating it would ehtertain no agreement outside the federal guidelines, and rejected recommendations relating to a new contract that had been made by the arbitrator of last year's settlement.

There had been no change in the city's attitude, Cameron said.

In an earlier answer Cameron referred to the union's position regarding strikes in essential services and said firefighters did not consider themselves bound by legislation banning such strikes.

Anselm asked if it was policy for the union to choose arbitration rather than elect to take limited strike action. Cameron agreed that it was, and Anselm asked if there had been a strike.

The firefighter said there had never been a strike but a strike vote was taken 1½ years ago.

The policy then was to act in cases where life and limb was at stake and allow the building in question to burn but not to spread to adjoining property — provided an active strike was in progress, Cameron said.

Anselm also asked about firefighters sleeping when on night shift, and how many hours of sleep a man might get.

Four or five hours, if uninterrupted by an alarm, Cameron said. But, using himself as an example, he said two or three hours of extra sleep at home was required before going back on shift.

Part of the firemen's submission is for a night differential in hourly pay, and Anselm asked Cameron if he knew how many other shift workers — such as millhands — are allowed to sleep.

"Probably none. None that I know of," he replied.

"Are policemen allowed to sleep on the job?"

"Not that I know of."

"Do you expect a shift dif-

"do you expect a shift differential when you are sleeping?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"We're there. It's inconvenient," Cameron replied.

Earlier, the witness had said firemen forego family and social life because of shift work, and although they may be promoted, they are never freed of rotating shifts.

Another claim is for extra hourly payment for fire-fighters with first aid certification, depending upon the level of competence reached.

Cameron said the men are third backup for the provincial emergency ambulance service, attend accidents when called out by police and man fire department vehicles carrying stretchers, first aid and oxygen equipment.

But firemen taking industrial first aid training to comply with Workers' Compensation are not granted special leave to attend classes and must make up on their own time any classes missed by reason of having to attend fire alarms.

The union's submission was expected to end today with testimony by Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, author of Firefighting in British Columbia, a report for the provincial attorney-general.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Surety bail of $500 was ordered by Ostler for Victoria area resident Karen Ann Flemming, 22, no fixed address, who was charged with trafficking in heroin in Esquimalt Jan. 22. She indicated she would seek Legal Aid and Ostler remanded the case to Friday for further hearing.

People entering the Victoria police station at 625 Fisgard Tuesday morning could use only one of the two main glass doors because the other had a sizeable chunk gone and city workmen were putting in a whole new piece of glass.

In court Tuesday afternoon, Oguz Sapmaz, 22, of 1921 Fernwood, was charged with mischief in damaging the glass door and was remanded to today for further hearing after he said he'd like to talk to Legal Aid.

A preliminary hearing of a narcotics charge against Victoria area resident Michael Francis Turpin, address not known, ended with Ostler ordering trial in a higher court. Turpin was charged with trafficking in MDA and speed in Victoria Sept. 29, 1975.

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, the penalty for Kurt Voight Hoyer, 22, of 1723 Bank, was set at one year of probation, 30 hours of community-seryice work and repayment of the damage he did April 27. Hoyer pleaded guilty earlier to a Victoria mischief charge laid after one bumper and two windshields were damaged on three parked cars.

In traffic court, Arthur Chester Angevine, 69, of 4040 White Rock, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of impaired driving one week ago today and was sentenced to 14 days in jail, to be served intermittently.

Three other persons were fined following pleas of guilty to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria. They were William Harold Gray, 21, of Vancouver, stopped June 9 and fined $400; Brian Wayne Trowsdale, 22, of 2213 Millstream, June 8 and $400, and Christopher Leonard Weyler, 34, of 580 Head, June 10 and $450.

Chemical Not Used In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — A decaffeinated coffee chemical that United States researchers say causes liver cancer in mice no longer is used in Canada, a health department spokesman said Tuesday.

Canadian coffee makers stopped using TCE, (trichloroethylene) more than one year ago, he said. The chemical had been used to remove caffeine and had been replaced as methylene chloride.

The U.S. National Cancer Institute has said that TCE, used by American coffee makers until last year, causes liver cancer in mice.

The health department spokesman said that when TCE was used in Canada, researchers did not find any of its residue in decaffeinated coffee. They also had not found any methylene chloride residue in the coffees.

"So it's a non-problem as far as we're concerned."

KISS SHOCKED

Chief Petty Officer John Bodymore, 36, told a court martial he had kissed the sailor, an 18-year-old mechanic, to show him what it was like to be kissed by someone with no teeth.

He said he had lost his false teeth the previous evening while balancing them on his nose at a party.

Capt. Brian Outwaite, prosecuting, said Bodymore and six sailors from the frigate Danae were on shore leave in New Orleans when the incident occurred in the Bourbon Street bar. The other sailors had been shocked by the kiss, which they said was prolonged.

Bodymore was demoted to petty officer and deprived of his good conduct medal after denying conduct prejudicial to good order and naval discipline.

Australians Slaughtering Beef Cattle

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Australian beef farmers, facing bankruptcy and ruin, are shooting their cattle while housewives are being warned to expect higher meat prices in the shops.

Cattlemen have been brought to the point of despair by drought, shrinking world markets and a combination of other factors.

The situation is serious in the state of Victoria, where a harsh drought has rendered much beef unsaleable.

A ranchers' spokesman has estimated that more than 20,000 head of cattle have been destroyed in Victoria and southern New South Wales since the beginning of the year, mainly because of drought.

Some farmers, knowing their animals will only fetch between 50 cents and $1.50 (Australian) a kilogram — between 28 and 85 cents a pound — at stockyards, choose instead to have them shot rather than meet the cost of transport.

In the Victoria town of Tongala about 1,000 cattle were slaughtered at one session.

Middlemen, processors and butchers who account for 75 per cent of the final meat bill, are being partly blamed for the situation.

Victorian ranchers' association secretary J. B. Barclay said an enormous increase in labor costs on the processing side has priced Australia out of overseas markets.

Between 1974 and 1975, processing costs for beef rose by about 81 per cent, he said.

C. H. Forster, executive director of the Victorian Farmers Union, claimed the middleman added enormously to the costs.

"Wages have soared in recent years and there's evidence that slaughterhouse workers are producing less and less for more pay than in other parts of the world," he said.

U.K. Grits Polling For Chief

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's Liberal Party will take a vote among its 25,000 members inthe next three weeks to elect a new party leader to succeed Jeremy Thorpe who stepped down recently.

It is the first time a British political party has held a leadership vote among its members in the next three country, as opposed to a vote by Parliamentary caucus.

Nominations closed Tuesday with two candidates in the running.

They are John Pardoe, 41, a radical who wants the small party to adopt a more passionate style, and David Steel, 38, who is described as a reformer but a realist.

Result of the election is expected July 8. The Liberals have 13 seats in the House of Commons.

India Sterilizes 2.65 Million

WASHINGTON — (WP) — India sterilized 2.65 million men and women between April 1975 and March 1976 as part of an expanded effort to slow population growth from the present million a month rate, a senior New Delhi official said Tuesday.

Gian Prakash, ranking civil servant for health and family planning, told reporters here that his government is opposed to forced sterilization because only 1,000 of India's 5,400 health centres are equipped to perform the operations and post operative care.

However, the program, which has utilized media propaganda and persuasion by local officials, already is believed to be one of the most extensive ever undertaken, he said.

Prakash is in the U.S. seeking at least $70 million in new loans and grants from the World Bank to carry out an ambitious birth control program announced in April.

Although the Indian government abandoned the idea of national mandatory sterilization earlier this year, Maharashtra state, encompassing Bombay, has legislation pending that would levey fines or prison terms against two million couples with more than three children, if the couples refuse sterilization.

The government also has barred government families with more than three children from receiving special credits or housing if they reject sterilization.

Prakash also said that his government has filed a patent application in the United States for a birth control serum that would be effective for nine months after a single injection.

India is also experimenting with nasal birth control sprays containing small quantities of steroids used in regular birth control pills.

The aim of the experiments is to find ways of simplifying birth control for Indian women.

As part of a tougher approach to health and family problems since the government assumed emergency powers a year ago, the government authorities there are considering requiring doctors trained in that country to remain for at least five years before emigrating, Prakash said.

Officials estimate that there are 7,500 Indian doctors practicing medicine in the United States.

Shawnigan Suburb Pushed

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Will the politicians step in where bureaucrats refuse to tread? Backers of a proposed moratorium on building and subdivision development around Shawnigan Lake hope so.

The moratorium request, along with a bid for a water study of the lake, has failed to get the needed support from provincial government bureaucrats.

Richard Stephenson, electoral area director for Shawnigan Lake on the Cowichan Valley Region Board, said Tuesday the proponents now are trying to arrange a meeting with Environment Minister Jim Nielson.

"We went through the civil servant route to see if any related department was interested in conducting a water study," Stephenson said. "They all agreed it was a priority item but said they had neither the money nor manpower to conduct such a study at this time. So now, we have decided to go the political route and see if we can get any action."

Stephenson is backed by interests in Mill Bay and Cobble Hill areas who feel that further development around the lake "could seriously jeopardize" the lake's potential as a bulk water supply for the area.

Building Slowing In Duncan

DUNCAN — Construction here is "down considerably" for this time of year, city building inspector Dave Cornish said in his monthly report to council this week, but he expected an upswing soon.

"A review of inquiries and applications for building permits by the technical planning committees would suggest it is simply the calm before the storm," Cornish told council in his report.

The total value of four permits issued in May was $8,500 compared with 17 permits valued at $1,028,451 in May, 1975.

In the first five months of this year 26 building permits valued at $3,085,580 have been issued compared to 40 permits valued at $2,127,451 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Oil Firm Bought

GEORGETOWN (Reuter) — The government of Guyana agreed Tuesday to pay the equivalent of about $261,000 for the local operations of the American West Indies Oil Co. Hubert Jack, energy and natural resources minister, paid the equivalent of $34,000 as first instalment after signing an agreement with the San Francisco-based company.

The Wills Were Bogus But the Imaginations Were Genuine

By GEORGE DULLEA
New York Times

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. — Well, 81 last wills and testaments — all signed "Howard Hughes," all purporting to be the one true will — have now been filed here at St. Joseph School.

And more wills are expected, according to Michael De Vito, as soon as certain slowpokes hand in their homework.

De Vito is the language arts teacher who challenged sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders at the parochial school to make their own Howard Hughes wills "using any writing method and style your gloriously clever minds will fathom."

They did not disappoint him. In fact, some students honored De Vito by bequeathing him the Spruce Goose, the billionaire's famous flying boat, and putting him right up there with such notables as:

—Clifford Irving, the bogus biographer, who was bequeathed $100 million in a Swiss bank account;

—Mayor Beame, bequeathed 500 New York City municipal bonds;

—Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio, bequeathed what were termed the Hughes "mistresses."

"I guess they did get a little carried away," De Vito was saying the other day en route to the classroom where the reading of the Howard Hughes wills, sixth-grade version, was to be held.

Inside, there was a momentary rustling of yellowed scrolls and burnt looseleaf sheets. But soon the 11- and 12-year olds will-makers settled down in their seats and the readings began.

They began, for the most part, "I, Howard Hughes, being of sound mind and body . . ." After that, however, the wills took off in various dispositive directions, some of which indicated heavy study of the Hughes obituaries.

Kathleen Voute, for example, had read the rumors about long fingernails. "Upon my death," she wrote, "the coroner is to be instructed to surgically remove my 10 fingernails and to convey, transfer, or set over such fingernails to the Revlon Company for experimental research."

Christopher Barnett, another Hughes scholar, was kind enough to leave the Mormong Tabernacle Choir a new piano. Rebecca Sheridan left the Howard Hughes Research Institute $1.5 billion "to probe for a way to eliminate household germs." And several students left a little something for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Then there were those who, like Michael O'Connor, thought charity began a bit closer to home. Michael bequeathed $1 million, plus 15 German shepherds, 100 guards, five maids and five butlers to "my secretly best friend, Kevin Martin."

Hollywood celebrities, with and without Hughes connections, were well-remembered in the sixth-grade wills. Besides that, a few liberties were taken on the number of his wives ("Five," according to Jacqueline Peloso — "They all married him for the money"), as well as the size of his fortune. (One estimate ran as high as $6 billion.)

In any case, everybody seemed to agree that Howard Hughes became so rich that "it ruined his whole life," as someone put it, because wealth forced him to play the recluse.

Consul Murdered

KINGSTON (Reuter) — Peru's Ambassador to Jamaica, Fernando Rodriguez, was stabbed to death Monday by thieves in his home, police said Tuesday. They said the ambassador returned home to find two men who demanded money and a gun, although there was no evidence that anything was stolen after the stabbing.

Conviction Follows Computer Tapping

BALTIMORE (AP) — A computer programmer, charged with what was described as the white-collar crime of the future, has been convicted of stealing classified information from the computer banks of the Federal Energy Administration.

The government said Bertram Seidlitz, 37, used a computer terminal attached to his telephone to tap the FEA central computer banks and extract 39 rolls of print-outs containing the agency's secret computer program.

U.S. Attorney Jervis Finney said no computer-stored information was actually obtained from the computer banks of the Washington-based agency. But with the program, Seidlitz had free access to any FEA classified information.

A justice department spokesman said the technique might be used to gain access to many computers in private industry and government, including the FBI, Internal Revenue Service or the CIA. All that was needed was the technology and the secret codes.

Finney identified Seidlitz as a former employee of Optimum Services Inc., a Rickville, Md., computer firm which handles the FEA's computer programming.

Seidlitz obtained secret agency code numbers which enabled him to extract the information by telephone from the computer, Finney said.

Seidlitz admitted at the trial he had extracted information from the computer on 15 occasions from telephones at his office and home.

Finney said Seidlitz was arrested before he obtained any agency records. Seidlitz was convicted Monday of two counts of wire fraud by a U.S. OSI said the conviction was

Stan Neeley, president of OSI th said the conviction was a "landmark" in the computer industry, "which needs to find a method to protect its assets from theft."

Seidlitz admitted the theft, but he said he did it only to show how lax security was at OSI.

Neeley said OSI, which has 1,300 employees throughout the country, is a large federal contracor that also performs computer work for the Federal Trade Commission, Environmental Protection Agency and the departments of State and Labour.

Neeley said the only reason Seidlitz was able to tap into the computer was because he was a former employee "who retained in his memory the keys to unlocking the information."

GARRISON PROJECT APPROVED

WASHINGTON (FP) — The U.S. House of Representatives gave an overwhelming vote of approval to the Garrison project Tuesday night, approving a further $12 million for construction of the controversial irrigation scheme in North Dakota.

The House approved the appropriation despite the warning of a Minnesota Congressman, Don Fraser, that the project could violate the Boundary Waters Treaty with Canada by polluting the Souris and Red rivers which flow into Manitoba.

An amendment sponsored by Fraser that would have cut off Garrison funding was defeated in the 435-member house by a vote of 244 to 156.

The money will finance construction of the Lonetree Reservoir, a key part of the $500 million irrigation scheme on which work started in 1967.

Fraser, a longtime Garrison opponent, told his colleagues the reservoir will be bigger than required if changes in the project are ordered to satisfy the objections of the Canadian government.

The Canada-U.S. International Joint Commission, a quasi-judicial body, is currently studying whether current plans for the project will violate the boundary waters treaty.

The U.S. State Department has said it will block any aspects of the project the commission concludes would be harmful to Canada.

VACCINE FOULED BY INSURANCE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A proposed national immunization program to vaccinate all Americans against an expected outbreak of swine flu is threatened by insurance problems.

Parke-Davis, one of the drug companies producing vaccine for the mass inoculations said Tuesday its liability insurance is being cancelled July 1, creating "an impossible situation."

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said his department plans to ask Congress for legislation "which would indemnify the companies against claims attributable to inoculation with the vaccine."

"Our company is more than willing to produce the vaccine for the government program," Parke-Davis said in telegrams to President Ford, administration health officials and key lawmakers.

"However, we are placed in an untenable position when we are requested to supply influenza vaccine to be used in a mass immunization program without any insurance coverage."

Teamsters Vote Raise for Bosses

LAS VEGAS (WP) — The Teamsters' convention Tuesday voted 25 per cent pay raises for the union's officers, large dues increases to pay for them and broad new powers, for local and international teamsters officials.

Only a handful of dissidents complained as the convention delegates voted time after time for sweeping changes in the union's constitution recommended by the Teamsters' leadership.

The changed approved will give Teamsters' president Frank Fitzsimmons an annual salary of $156,250 and will raise basic union dues 40 per cent over the next 16 months.

The convention also voted to give Fitzsimmons the power to appoint "international representatives" and pay them unlimited salaries for unspecified duties which "he may determine."

Dissidents within the union have complained that Fitzsimmons "misused a previously granted power to appoint "international organizers" and pay them up to $30,000 a year. Many recipients of these jobs do little or no organizing work, the dissidents have charged.

Now Fitzsimmons will be able to appoint anyone he likes as international representatives, and there will be no limit on the salary he can pay these representatives.

Convention delegates shouted overwhelming approval after Senator Ed Lawson, leader of Canadian Teamsters, defended the increase by noting the cost of living had risen 39.8 per cent since 1971, the last time officers' salaries were raised.

A delegate from Detroit Local 299, Peter Camarata, attempted to introduce a resolution limiting salaries so as to "silence the critics of the union." But Fitzsimmons cut him off, saying, "There will be no criticism of union officers."

Floods, Mud Slide, Fires Strike U.S.

By United Press International

A third straight day of violent weather across the middle of the United States triggered 10-inch rains that swamped streets, homes and hospitals in Houston and touched off a killer mudslide in South Dakota Tuesday while bush fires flared in California.

The combinatin of thunderstorms, tornadoes and floods killed at least two persons. Four others were reported missing and feared drowned.

In Houston, the rain fell in seven hours sending bayous and creeks gushing into the basements of hospitals and forcing a weather postponement of a game in the Houston Astrodome for the first time in its 11-year history.

Houston civil defence authorities said at least four persons were missing, including a 10-month-old child and a 3-year-old girl who may have fallen into a rain-filled manhole.

Brush and grass fires burned at both ends of California today and state officials feared even bigger blazes might follow because a heat wave after a rainless winter has left the state tinder dry.

Some 400 firefighters Tuesday evening contained a fire which blackened 15,000 acres east of Red Bluff after it "burned the heart out" of a winter feeding range.

Carter Carries Majority

United Press International

A nationwide survey shows Jimmy Carter now has 20 more than the 1,505 national convention delegates he need to win the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Carter Tuesday passed the mark needed in UPI's poll of delegates, which put the former Georgia governor's total at 1,525. That does not include hundreds of potential supporters in states where party leaders are preparing to board the Carter bandwagon.

Carter's decisive edge came in the counting of new supporters in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The candidate, confident of victory, was vacationing at Sea Island, Ga.

President Ford passed the 1,000-delegate mark in his quest for the 1,130 needed for the republican nomination. The UPI count showed Ford with 1,009 delegates and Ronald Reagan with 893. There were 98 uncommitted delegates and 258 still to be chosen.

U.S. Smoking Fewer, Milder

WASHINGTON (WP) — The proportion of adult Americans smoking cigarettes has decreased during the past five years and most of those who still smoke are inhaling safer cigarettes, the government reported Tuesday.

A government survey also showed that both smokers and non-smokers increasingly believe that further restrictions should be placed on where cigarete smoking should be allowed.

"More than half the smokers at the present time would like to see smoking allowed in fewer places than it is now, despite the fact that there are more and more restrictions on places where people are allowed to smoke," the Public Health Service concluded.

"The American who smokes today is finding his world narrowing," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the Centre for Disease Control which released the study. The centre is part of the Public Health Service.

The American smoker "is becoming increasingly beleaguered and is usually ambivalent about smoking," Sencer added. "He continues to rationalize the hazards."

The survey found that 33.8 per cent of adult Americans smoked cigarettes in 1975 compared with 36.3 per cent in 1970 and 42.5 per cent in 1964.

The average cigarette now produces 18.3 milligrams of tar and 1.18 milligrams of nicotine, which are believed to be the most hazardous substances in cigarettes. Twenty-five years ago, said Dr. Daniel Horn, director of the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health, the average cigarette produced more than twice as much of those substances — 40 milligrams of tar and 2.3 milligrams of nicotine.

British Pork Pie Is So-o-o Good

FOOD & nutrition

In Britain, hot water crust raised pies filled with pork, veal and ham, mixed game and rooks are great favorites, with the most famous of all being the Melton Mowbray Pie. These succulent pies are usually eaten cold, as a luncheon, a picnic dish or an excellent buffet item and this is how I prefer them but a slice re-heated with a rich sauce, makes a terrific entree.

In Britain, "pie" is traditionally used to describe a main course of meat, fowl, fish or mixed game dish. What we in North America term as "pie"—apple, cherry and etc.—is, or at least was, known in Britain as a tart.

The traditional way of making a raised pie is by using hot pastry but if you don't have a mould in which to make a raised pie, don't mess around with hot water pastry, use cold water and use a standard loaf pan, it will turn out just as good and will be much neater in appearance.

When I'm invited to a party, I usually present a pie to my hostess on arrival and then get bugged all night for the recipe. So here it is:

TINY'S VERY SPECIAL KING-SIZED PORK PIE

Here is what you will need to make a beauty — and it's not expensive.

Collect together 1½ pound finely ground RAW pork, not too lean, a hunk of inexpensive boned shoulder is excellent; four eggs, six ounces lard, four cups flour, one envelope plain gelatin, one cup cold water, one teaspoon dried parsley, ¼ teaspoon dried Thyme, ½ teaspoon oregano, dash of sage, dash of dried ginger, salt and black pepper.

Also, start some rich stock with bones, onion, carrot, stick of celery, and simmer until you end up with about two cups stocks. The envelope of gelatin is stirred in to ensure the stock jellies when cold, so it's worth doing in advance, maybe the previous day, and after chilling in the fridge to check jelling, the waste fat can be taken off the top.

Mix all the herbs and spices thoroughly into the meat and put aside. Then, in a large mixing bowl, cut the lard into the flour, finally rubbing through your hands to obtain a texture finely granular in effect.

Add one cup water, stir and mix and finally knead a little, adding just a smidgin more water if needed but aiming for rather a dryish pastry. Unlike more delicate pastries, it can take considerable handling.

Cut off a quarter for the pie lid and roll the rest into an oblong shape about ¼ inch thick. Thoroughly grease an 8 x 5 inch loaf pan, even Teflon based pans, drape the pastry over and press it carefully down to fill all corners without tearing or allowing thick sections to build up. Cut off level with the rim of the pan and fill with the UNCOOKED seasoned meat. Roll out the lid, moisten the edges with cold water, press firmly to seal, cut off spare and cut a small slit in the centre to allow steam to escape.

Put the pie in a medium hot oven at 425 degrees and at the end of one hour, or sooner if the pastry lid becomes too dark, brush top with beaten egg, cover carefully with foil to prevent the pastry scorching and cook for a further hour in a 375 degree oven to cook the meat. I usually brush the top two or three times with beaten egg to get a fine glaze.

Cool the pie on a rack, leaving it in the pan. Then when cold, remove from the pan, heat up the jellied filler and pour in the top hole until the pie is filled. Cool and then wrap and place in fridge for the pie to set.

For a really fancy pie, hard-cook three eggs, by simmering just below boiling point for 10 minutes, chill swiftly, peel and allow to cool. Then when filling the pie with the meat, bring the level up halfway and insert the three hard-cooked eggs in a line across the centre and pile the rest of the meat on until the pie is filled.

When the pie is quite cold, it can be cut into thick slices that will hold together because the rich stock will have filled every space with jelly. If you include the hard-cooked eggs, there will be a lovely slice in the centre of each portion.

The secret is using finely ground raw meat with a certain amount of fat that assists the crust in beoming crisp and brown on the outside and moist and succulent inside. Your stock must jelly or the slices will not retain perfect shape and one must use what might appear to be a large quantity of seasoning, because pies to be eaten cold need more seasoning.

This great pie is also a real fridge-raider's delight.

(Note: For readers who don't eat pork for religious or dietary purposes, substitute raw veal or raw chicken or use veal AND chicken finely place of the lard.)

The Creative Strawberry.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.
Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

EASY STRAWBERRY JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID FRUIT PECTIN.

Makes about 5 medium glasses.
1¾ cups prepared fruit (about 1 qt fully ripe berries)
4 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit—Thoroughly crush, one layer at a time, about 1 quart strawberries. Measure 1¾ cups into a large bowl.

Then make the jam—Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Let stand 10 minutes. Mix lemon juice with Certo in a small bowl then stir into fruit. Continue stirring about 3 minutes. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses and cover at once with tight lids.

Let jam stand at room temperature until set (this may take up to 24 hours); then store in freezer.

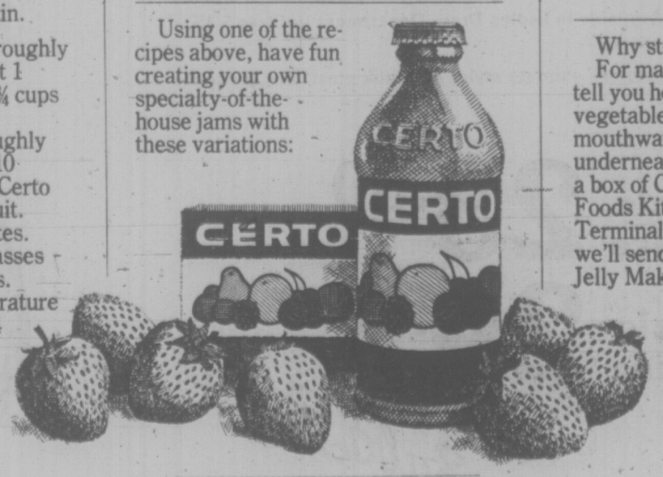
If you plan to use jam within 3 weeks, it can be stored in refrigerator.

EASY STRAWBERRY JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as previously described, using a total of 2 cups mashed berries. Mix fruit and sugar. Let stand 10 minutes. Then prepare the pectin—combine ¾ cup water and 1 box Certo crystals in a saucepan. (No lemon juice is used in this method.) Bring to a boil; boil 1 minute, stirring constantly to dissolve. Add to fruit mixture as above. Makes about 6 medium glasses.

3 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes above, have fun creating your own specialty-of-the-house jams with these variations:



1. Strawberry-Citrus Rind Jam—Prepare Strawberry Jam as directed, adding 1 tablespoon grated lemon, lime, or orange rind to strawberries and sugar.

2. Taste-of-Honey Strawberry Jam—Prepare Strawberry Jam as directed, reducing sugar to 3 cups and adding 1 cup honey with the sugar.

3. Sherried Strawberry Jam—Prepare Strawberry Jam as directed adding ¼ cup sherry to strawberries and sugar.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun! For many, many more recipes that tell you how to turn the fruits (and vegetables) of every season into mouthwatering delicacies, take a peek underneath the label of a bottle or into a box of Certo or write to General Foods Kitchens, P.O. Make the Most Of Strawberries

Every June I search for different variations of strawberry shortcake.

Today's pride and joy starts with a sponge cake — made exactly as you would for a jelly roll — very easy for any cook.

Then comes the assembling — it has three layers separated with sliced berries and soft custard. Make it for dessert next Sunday.

STRAWBERRY SPONGECAKE TORTE
(serves 8 to 10)

Batter:
4 large eggs
¼ c. hot milk
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 c. sugar
1 c. stirred but not sifted cake-and-pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt

Filling:
1 qt. strawberries

Soft Custard:
2½ c. milk
⅓ c. sugar
2 tsp. corn starch
¼ tsp. salt
3 large eggs
2 tbsp. Grand Marnier or Cointreau or Drambuie (optional)

To make Songe Cake in beater bowl beat the eggs with the hot milk until THICK and lemony. Add lemon juice then slowly add sugar while beating. Beat on "high" 10 minutes in all. Remove beaters.

Sift together unsifted flour, baking powder and salt and with wire whip fold into beaten eggs in four instalments, being sure all flour is incorporated. Spread evenly on 10x15" jellf roll pan lined with buttered wax paper. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 10 to 11 minutes. Turn out at once on rack and at once peel off wax paper.

When cool cut crosswise into three even oblongs — each 5" wide. If desired, trim off crusty edges. Place one layer on fancy serving plate.

To make Custard heat milk and sugar together until quite warm. Meanwhile beat together cornstarch, eggs and salt. Stir into hot milk-sugar mixture with wire whip until slightly thick — it will coat bottom of silver spoon. Immediately remove from heat. Do not overcook. Stir in liqueur if used. Chill.

At serving time spread a little custard on top of bottom cake layer and cover completely with sliced strawberries; put on second layer and repeat. Put on top layer. Pour enough custard over top to coat but do not use it all. Pour remainder into a glass pitcher. Decorate top attractively with more sliced berries. When the host serves this he or she cuts it into thick slices, pours additional custard sauce over and tops that with more slightly sweetened sliced berries.

Strawberry sponge torte: a new twist on spongecake

Good for Eskimos, But Not for All eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

A Toronto broadcaster took to the air recently to settle an argument he'd been having with his wife. She'd caught him eating the fat off his roast beef and had sneered at him: "Bill, trim the fat. You'll raise your cholesterol."

Bill, on the other hand, thought this was all a bunch of bologna (forgive the pun). He'd read a news story about a study that showed that Eskimos who eat a diet high in animal fat seldom die of heart disease. (High blood cholesterol is a risk factor in heart disease.) He confessed that the researchers had not drawn any conclusions but it seemed obvious to him that animal fat didn't make any difference. If the Eskimoes could eat it, so could he.

But it's not that obvious. The researchers had good reason for not drawing any conclusions. You see, there are many factors that may cause a rise in blood cholesterol. Among these factors are your heredity, the stress you live with, your smoking, eating and drinking habits.

Consider the Eskimos. They are genetically different from the rest of Canadians. They are highly in-bred, and their bodies have, over the centuries, adapted to a diet high in both protein and fat. This is an important plus in their favour. Individuals whose parents had heart disease need to be particularly careful with their diet and with stressful life conditions. We can't change our heredity. We are born into it.

Eskimos live a lifestyle distinct from that of other Canadians. They tend to be more physically active, and emotionally more relaxed. They do not battle traffic, elevators, secretaries, bosses and other urban anxieties. We do. Tension is a part of the way that most of us live.

But what we don't realize is that stress puts cholesterol inducing hormones into the blood stream. At least, we don't realize it until it's too late.

We charge into life working up one crisis after another in the name of achieving and getting ahead. The lucky ones who survive only a mild heart attack get a chance to sort out of their life priorities and to eliminate any stressful conditions.

So, contrary to general belief, stress can be controlled, if you just put your mind to it.

But of all the factors that could lead to high blood cholesterol and heart disease diet is the easiest to control.

The rules are simple: avoid animal fats; eat foods such as poultry, fish, nuts, beans and lentils that give you protein without the fat; trim fats from meats; use vegetable oils in place of animal fat for cooking; and control the consumption of eggs. (Anyone over forty should eat only three eggs per week, no more and, unless your doctor advises otherwise, no less.)

As to alcohol, it can induce cholesterol, so limit alcohol consumption. The same applies to sugar — cut it down as far as you can go.

To get back to the difference between the Eskimos and us, let's face it — an Eskimo is not your average Canadian. Bill, had your parents and great, great grandparents been Eskimos; and if your lifestyle was one of simple pursuits instead of broadcasting and writing, you might well enjoy those juicy bits of animal fat.

As it is, we'd have to advise you, (at least in this instance) to listen to your wife.

Metric Guide Reprinted To Meet Need

A booklet entitled Easy Metric put out by Canadian Consumer magazine is being reprinted because of the "incredible demand" for more copies, says Sidney Madden, a volunteer in Victoria for the Consumers' Association of Canada.

The complete guide to metric system was first published as an insert in the association's magazine in April and since then individuals and companies have sent a barrage of requests for more copies, Madden said.

In its 24 pages, the guide contains 20 areas on the wherefore and why of metric use and how to understand metric easily.

Cabbage: A Veg for All Seasons

hilda beastall

Every adult supposedly has read that cabbage is an excellent source of nutrition at low cost, yet how many of us make a point of including this fairly inexpensive vegetable in meals even twice weekly?

While waiting for local summer cabbages to come fresh from garden or market we have to make the best of what is available. Chose a cabbage having the most green color. It will taste better than a pale white one and it will be more digestible.

Make at least one salad meal a week from uncooked cabbage, for its vitamin C is lost in cooking water.

Cabbage Cheese Salad

1 cup finely shredded cabbage
¼ cup homemade yogurt
1 tsp lemon juice
1 Tbsp finely chopped date few grains salt
¼ cup grated mild Cheddar cheese
OR grated Edam cheese

Shred the cabbage very fine with a sharp knife and quickly mix it with the lemon juice and yogurt to prevent further loss of vitamins. Mix in chopped date, sprinkle with salt.

To Boil Cabbage: Shred about 2 cups of fresh cabbage very fine and drop into boiling water to cover; boil rapidly without lid for about four minutes.

Test a few pieces, teh cabbage should still be crisp bvut tender to bite. Drain well, keeping the liquid as soup stock. Add a knob of butter or margarine, a few grains of salt and a teaspoon of fresh lemon juice. Serves 2 as one vegetable at meal. This method will be found more digestible than boiling for longer periods in much water.

Cabbage and apple go together well as salad or cooked as vegetable with meats or egg dishes.

Cabbage with Apples

2 cups shredded cabbage
2 Tbsp soft margarine
¼ cup thin sliced onion
1 Tbsp vinegar or lemon juice
½ tsp salt
1 cup chopped apple
½ cup homemade yogurt

Add shredded cabbage and onion at once to heated margarine in skilllet or frypan with cover. Add vinegar (or lemon juice) and salt. Cover tightly and cook gently about three minutes. Stir to prevent sticking. Add chopped apple (Granny Smiths are the best at this time of year), cover again and cook gently until fork tender. Serve with yougurt, with any savory dish. Two servings.

Scalloped Cabbage can be made in a covered skillet instead of using oven heat, first cooking the cabbage lightly as suggested above under To Boil Cabbage.

Scalloped Cabbage

2 cups cooked shredded cabbage
1 Tbsp soft margarine
¼ cup mixed wholewheat breadcrumbs, wheat germ and wheat bran
1 Tbsp grated Cheddar cheese
¼ cup homemade yogurt

Cook cabbage; meanwhile melt margarine in skillet, add mixed crumbs, wheat germ and bran (this gives a pleasant texture and flavor.)

Lyy cooked cabbage over the crumbs. Cover and reheat gently to brown the crumbs a little. Serve by turning each spoonful upside down on plate; sprinkle with a little cheese and top with yogurt. Serves 2.

Imported cucumbers are available now but unlike green cabbage, they are not included here for their nutritional value, for they have only traces of nutrients but still people like them and buy them.

So here is a cold soup made into a nutritious light meal by adding other ingredients of known values.

Keep this recipe for warm days ahead, it takes less time than a salad because there is no arranging on plates. It is mixed in a big bowl; serve cold with a ladle.

Cucumber Sunflower Soup

1½ cups homemade yogurt
2 Tbsp soy or sunflower oil oil
¾ cup cucumber, small diced
¼ tsp salt
1 tsp lemon juice
¼ cup ground sunflower seeds OR raw unsalted peanuts
2 tsp finely chopped chives
1 tsp finely chopped parsley

Beat yogurt with oil, using a fork, until smooth. Add all remaining ingredients except parsley. Sprinkle parsley on top. Serves 2 . Quantity of chives may be reduced or increased as wished. When fresh garlic is again available later in summer, press the juice from one clove and add to yogurt when beating, and omit chives.

Warm homemade buns with cheese complete an easy quick meal which has everything.

Cabbage and cucumber, uninteresting by themselves perhaps, but tempting and satisfying when combined with simple ingredients.

Dear Readers:

It really is amazing how much gratification we get from having the opportunity to write this column. Not only does it give us great pleasure to help you with caring for your house plants but sometimes we get an even greater joy from your letters telling of your experiences and, quite frankly, telling us things we didn't know before.

For instance: Not long ago we published a letter from a reader who was growing a coffee tree indoors and was having problems. Briefly, we replied that we really couldn't be much help because we had neither seen nor heard of coffee trees being grown indoors and no book, including the Exotica, the Encyclopedia of Plants, indicated that our morning eye-opener producer could be cultivated right next to the percolator. But oh, how wrong we were! Since the publication of that letter, we have received literally hundreds of letters from people telling us that not only do they have coffee trees in their homes but most of the plants have been thriving for months, even years.

All indicated that they had purchased their plants either through the mail or at local nurseries and, by keeping the plants in good light, and watering and feeding frequently, they had not only grown to very large proportions but many had actually borne beans! How else but through the medium of this newspaper column could we have learned about this?

Co-Op Cuts Costs Of Buying Food

TORONTO (CP) — Mary Smith says 140 families who formed a non-profit food-buying club eat fresher produce for lower prices than if they bought food in a supermarket.

Mrs. Smith, a founding member of the club, said she does an informal price survey every few weeks to see what she's saving.

One week, for example, a market basket, of 23 fruits and vegetables would have cost $11.11 at the supermarket compared with $8.23 at the food co-operative, a saving of 25.9 per cent.

"In a supermarket, you never know how long the produce has been sitting around," she said. "But at the co-op, it's rushed straight from the Ontario Food Terminal to the store and sold the same day."

Members of the Regent Park Co-op, in a portable classroom in downtown Toronto, pay $5 to join and buy produce at cost plus a 15-per-cent markup to cover handling and spoilage.

"My children have never had it so good," said Mrs. Smith.

Wendy King, member of the Karma II Food Co-op in the basement of Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, said she is surprised that Toronto's food co-op movement is not larger.

Miss King is one of the volunteers trying to launch the Toronto Federation of Food Co-ops which recently applied for incorporation.

She said the federation hopes to provide physical and moral support for its 14 member co-ops and to encourage the formation of new ones, especially in the suburbs.

Mrs. Smith said she has been told by Regent Park Co-op members that their children look healthier. One member who used to buy a large amount of candy now puts out carrot and celery sticks as snacks.

She said she spends the same amount on her food budget each week as before but that now the money goes farther.

Gingered Carrots

1½ pounds baby carrots
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ginger
Dash cinnamon

Cook carrots in boiling, salted water until tender (about 15 minutes). Combine remaining ingredients and heat until honey and butter are melted. Pour over carrots. Garnish with parsley sprigs if desired. 6 servings.

Tip to Teenagers: Put on the Brakes

DEAR ABBY: Now that summer is here, I notice so many teenagers driving much too fast and recklessly.

Two years ago I clipped the enclosed editorial from our local newspaper and showed it to our teenage son and daughter, and after they read it they became two of the most sensible drivers alive.

Please print it, Abby. It may do the same for others. — DAILY READER

DEAR READER: It's well worth an entire column. Who wrote it? And for which newspaper? I want to credit the author.

PLEASE GOD, I'M ONLY 17

The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheedled the car out of Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded, "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remember was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard the deafening crash and felt a terrific jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened: it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head. I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I am supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a drawer. My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son."

The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away.

Please . . . somebody . . . wake me up? Get me out of here. I can't bear to see my Mom and Dad so broken up. My grandparents are so wracked with grief they can barely walk. My brother and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody! No one can believe this. And, I can't believe it either.

Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance. Please God, I'm only 17.

Where Does A Wrinkle Come From?

You've seen pictures of desert lakes. Dry land with cracks all over it. The cracks are there because there's no moisture under the ground. That's the way it is with a wrinkle. When the tiny cells under your skin dry out, the cells shrink. And outside, on your skin, a wrinkle appears. Sooner or later it happens to everybody.

If you could get something to put pure, fresh moisture back into those cells, your wrinkles would fade. Even disappear. Now you can get that something at better drug and department stores. It's called 2nd Debut, a specially formulated beauty discovery that's been proven to make wrinkles fade, often even disappear. Both potencies, 2nd Debut with CEF 600 and with CEF 1200 are guaranteed to help make facial skin look years younger in just 10 days or money back!

Montreal Will Teach Nutrition to 90,000

MONTREAL (CP) — About 90,000 children in city schools are going to learn about nutriaion next year under a new system which has nutritional instruction added to the curriculum.

Some school boards plan to start the new program with children from only the junior grades for the moment, while others will include secondary school students.

The education project is the second part of a $2 million nutrition program in area schools. The first part was the clearing out of junk foods from the schools, while at the same time subsidizing more nutritious foods.

Nicole Saint Jean Demers, nutrition director for the Island School Council said that although the food service reform came first, the primary purpose is nutrition education.

"We started with the food itself because a number of children had to eat in the schools and we felt responsible in terms of the food we were offering," Mrs. Demers said. "Also, serving only nutritious food was a way to introduce the principles of good nutrition."

She said there now is a nutritionist on the staff of each schoolboard in the area.

"The nutritionist is adapting her nutrition education program to local habits and social and cultural backgrounds in her school district."

Mrs. Demers said she would like to see nutrition introduced as a part of other subjects and not necessarily as a separate course.

A history class on trading ships might include the story of scurvy, a disease caused by a deficiency of vitamin C or a geography lesson might cover a foreign country's food habits along with climate, housing and clothing.

"We want nutrition taught in a casual, normal way," Mrs. Demers said. "We don't want outsiders to do it . . . professionals who don't know the students."

"And the best people to carry simple information to children are their classroom teachers."

Dietician Jean Gowdey, who has been involved in adding nutritional instruction to chrome economics classes in Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal schools for two years, said children have been passing on what they learn to their parents.

Parents had told her that their children tell them not to fry foods so often or to eat fewer potato chips or to keep carrot sticks in the refrigerator.

The parents appeared to take such tips in good spirit, pleased their children were responding so well to their classes.

Students between the ages of 11 and 13 are conscious of food values, she said.

As one part of the program, 1,900 colorful nutrition educaaion kits rave been distributed to teachers.

These kits, based on materials acquired from the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Council of California, were financed by a $25,000 contribution from the Quebec Milk Producers Federation.

CARROTS ARE TOPS

It may be just plain horse sense that makes horses like carrots, but what's sense for a horse often makes just as good sense for us humans. When it comes to carrots, there's a case where that's true.

Carrots are a year round favorite because they store well, but they are at their tender, succulent best when they are small, slender and freshly picked. Look for bunched young carrots with fresh green tops. Everyone enjoys nibbling on the raw, crunchy root but when served as a vegetable, one and a half pounds will usually serve six persons.

Carrots are an excellent source of vitamin A, the vitamin needed for growth, normal vision, and healthy skin. The beautiful deep orange color is due to carotene, which is a "provitamin" or freely translated as a "before vitamin." Carotene is changed to essential vitamin A by the healthy body. Since one raw carrot provides only 20 calories, you can munch on plenty of grated or raw carrots, even if you're on a reducing diet.

New carrots are usually washed and lightly scraped or pared before cooking in a small amount of boiling, salted water. The small ones are left whole and larger ones cut into ½-inch slices so they will all be cooked at the same time, about 15 minutes.

LEMON BUTTERED CARROTS

1½ pounds baby carrots
2 tablespoons butter
3 medium apples, cored and cut in wedges
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Cook carrots in boiling salted water until tender (about 15 minutes). Drain. Add 2 tablespoons butter and apple. Cover and cook until apples are tender (about 5 minutes more). Combine cornstarch, sugar and salt. Gradually add water. Stir and cook until thick and clear. Remove from heat; add 1 tablespoon butter, lemon rind and juice. Pour over carrots and apples. Garnish with lemon twists if desired. 6 servings.

Try Rhubarb Cake

The newsletter notes that it originates with Mrs. Ed Diewold. One of her cakes made a big hit at the centre, so she sent along this recipe:

Bottom part:

2 cups flour, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-half cup butter, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 egg.

Crumble flour, butter, salt and baking powder. Mix in egg with fork. Save three-quarters of a cup of this for topping. Press remainder in pan size 8 by 10.

Top part:

4 cups fresh rhubarb cut in cubes, 1½ cups of sugar, half cup melted butter, half cup flour, 2 eggs, beaten.

Put on top of pressed crumbs. Cover with remaining crumbs. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bake at 350 F. until set, about 45 minutes to an hour.

No Student Met Standard

The Citizenship Tray, representative of Mount Douglas Secondary's all-round outstanding student was not presented this year because it was felt no student lived up to the high standards necessary to receive the award.

Although there were many top students in individual categories, the awards committee decided none was outstanding in all areas — academic, service, leadership in the entire school, participation in other activities and sportsmanship — to qualify for the citizenship tray.

It was not the first time the award has not been presented.

At the awards day presentations last week, the Melvile Parham scholarship cup went to Doug Goodman, a straight-A Grade 12 student.

Top Grade 11 student was David Esler, who was awarded the Edwards scholarship cup.

Tim Hegedus, one of the eight runners-up in the scholarship cup, won individual subject awards in literature, languages and history.

Goodman also won individual citations in Science and English. Other scholarship runners-up with individual subject awards were Erich Ranfft (social studies and English) and Kruno Pavlicic (math and science).

The Eric Foster award for outstanding service to the school went to Mark Salter.

A new award this year for leadership, the Principal's Shield, went to James Darke for organizing the grad class.

The Kiwanis Shield service award went to Debbie McKerrow for the Pep Club.

Bev Gait won the Alan McDonald award — the first time a girl has won the school's top sports award.

She also tied with Debbie Campbell for the Grade 12 outstanding female athlete.

Outstanding Grade 12 male athlete was John Philip, and the Art Cornish award for sportsmanship went to Art Hobbs.

AWARD NIGHT IN LANGFORD

The public is invited to the awards night starting at 7:30 p.m. in the north wing gymnasium.

Lecture on Indian Painting

A lecture on the development of Indian miniature painting will be given at Victoria Art Gallery Thursday by Dr. Siri Gunasinghe. The lecture will begin at 8 p.m. and is sponsored by the Asian Art Society of Victoria. There will be no admission charge.

Dr. Gunasinghe is a professor at UVic teaching Buddhist and Hindu art. He has written extensively on the art of India and is working on a book under the title Painting in Ceylon.

A sculpture involving approximately 1,400 yardsticks in the shape of a partial room over eight feet tall and about seven feet wide, went on view this week at the Moss Street gallery.

It is the work of Vancouver artist Garry Lee-Nova and is entitled Out to Metric. It has been produced in collaboration with Alan Miller and consists of wood, metal and glass, suggesting in three-dimensional form the kind of breakaway rendering that an architect might draw to display the interior of a room.

The sculpture will be on view until Aug. 15.

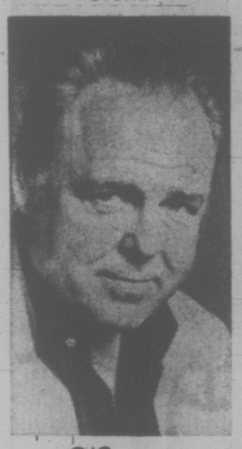
PUGET SOUND LEAPER QUENCHED BY POLICE

TACOMA — Waitress Julie Kellum, who said she was going to jump or dive 350 feet from the rail of the Tacoma Narrows bridge to Puget Sound some 350 feet below, was intercepted by the law. Police stepped in Tuesday and stopped her from her well-publicized leap, while a crowd of about 500 groaned its disappointment.

Stella

LOS ANGELES—Stella Stevens was two weeks too late in filing a $7-million invasion-of-privacy suit against Playboy magazine for publishing a nude photograph of her. Judge Robert Weil dismissed the complaint because of a one-year statute of limitations.

NEW YORK — Carroll O'Connor has testified in a $500,000 invasion-of-privacy suit, that Swank magazine published a "completely bogus" interview with him. The interview, titled Archie Bunker Raps on the real Carroll O'Connor, appeared in Swank "among the pages of swingers and swappers," the actor and his lawyer told state Supreme Court. O'Connor said he had never met Leo Guild, whose name appears as the interviewer and pears at the interviewer and writer.



O'Connor

BEVERLY HILLS — Princess Grace of Monaco will become a member of the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation's board of directors and the board's first woman director, the company said Tuesday. She will be paid an annual fee of $7,500 plus an extra $250 for each meeting she attends.

PHILADELPHIA — The city election commissioners today began examining petitions bearing 212,000 signatures calling for Mayor Frank Rizzo's removal.

Grace

FRANKFURT — English pop singer and composer John Christian Dee was jailed for six years Tuesday for trying to kill his West German lover after she made it clear she wanted to end their relationship.

TEL AVIV — Self-styled world citizen Garry Davis was expelled from Israel after an unsuccessful attempt to enter the country on his home-made passport. He left aboard a flight to New York after telling reporters he plans to return in October. Davis, who tore up his U.S. passport in 1948 and declared himself a "citizen of the world," arrived here two days ago with a companion on a World Service Authority passport, issued by the World Government Movement which he founded. Davis, 55, has been imprisoned more than 20 times for crossing frontiers without proper documents.

Doubling Up All the Way

MONTREAL — When Alwin and Arthur Richmond walk down the street with their wives, people do a double-take. Not only are Alwin and Arthur identical twins, but their wives, LaVona and LaVelda, are identical twins too.

Last December, Alwin and Arthur popped the question to LaVona and LaVelda Rose.

"The asked us both to be seated," says LaVona, "and they told us they were going shopping the next day for rings, and would we agree to be engaged."

"We had a premonition they'd ask us," says LaVelda, "and we talked about it beforehand."

So last week in Iowa City, Iowa, with their father walking between them LaVona and LaVelda walked down the aisle to marry Alwin and Arthur in a double ceremony.

They had twin attendants, twin bridesmaids, twin flower-girls, twin soloists and twin organists.

"We couldn't find twin ministers," says LaVelda.

The Richmonds are in Montreal this week on their honeymoon, and are taking the occasion to seek out Canadian twins to attend the 42nd International Convention of Twins next Sept. 3 in Valley Forge, Pa.

When their honeymoon ends, they plan to live together in a triplex in Aurora, Ill.

The brides are 42 and grooms 54.

Sauce for the Goose Saucy for the Gander

BEVERLY HILLS — Women, at least most of those surveyed by a research firm, like pictures of nude men, Playgirl magazine says.

The magazine, which publishes nude male centrefolds, commissioned the research firm of Huag and Associates to determine whether women really like such pictures.

If the answer had been No, a magazine spokeswoman told a news conference Tuesday that would have been the end of the centrefolds.

Two-thirds of 500 "urban women" questioned in New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston and Los Angeles replied they find pictures of nude men "appealing, exciting and sexual," the magazine said — so the centrefolds will continue.

NIXON BOOK SOLD

NEW YORK — The New York Times Co. has purchased newspaper and magazine serialization rights to former president Richard Nixon's memoirs. The terms of the Times transaction with Warner Books, which received from Nixon the worldwide publication rights to the memoirs, was not disclosed. The book's first draft is expected to be ready for editing by the end of 1976.

Thumbs Up For Telly

Savalas (Kojak) said his reputation had been damaged by the article.

The story said the actor's nights out in Berlin had harmed his performance in a film he was making in 1974.

Savalas said he would spend the award money in Britain.

AGED MAO QUITS THE ACTIVE LIST

PEKING — For the first time in more than a year Mao Tse-tung has failed to meet a foreign leader on an official visit to Peking.

The failure of Mao to meet Madagascar President Didier Ratsiraka has strengthened the general belief that the health of the 82-year-old Communist party chairman is continuing to decline.

An official spokesman Tuesday night made the strongest indication yet of Mao's failing health by revealing a Central Committee decision to end Mao's audiences with "foreign distinguished guests."

The statement to a Reuter reporter in Peking that Mao was "well advanced in years, still very busy" but would no longer see dignitaries came shortly after he failed to greet Ratsiraka.

The recurrent speculation caused by Mao's frail appearance at audiences "was just too hard on the Chinese people," said one anlayst, attempting to explain the decision.

Another analyst said he felt the announcement would simply add to fears that Mao was near death.

Evidence Not Hidden, Pen Guard Tells Jury

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A former British Columbia penitentiary guard was following regulations and did not attempt to conceal evidence following the death of prison worker Mary Steinhauser, a coroner's inquest was told Tuesday.

Fred Leach, the federal institute's director of security when Miss Steinhauser was killed in a hostage-taking incident June 11, 1975, said that guard Albert Hollinger did not purposely mix up the weapons after a tactical squad rushed three prisoners who had taken 15 hostages 41 hours earlier.

Miss Steinhauser, a classification officer, was shot and killed during the incident.

Coroner Doug Jack said during the sixth day of the inquest that there has been suggestions that one member of the tactical squad purposely mixed up the weapons.

"This was not the case at all," said Leach, now security chief of the regional psychiatric centre at Matsqui.

"The men are trained not to leave weapons laying around. If he (Hollinger) didn't do it, somebody else would have done it. If nobody else, then I would have done it."

The inquest earlier was told that the six-man tactical squad had no holsters and the guns were placed on a fable both before and after the shooting.

Chief Justice John Farris of the British Columbia Supreme Court had accused Hollinger during a federally-commissioned inquiry last summer of deliberately collecting the guns from other members of the tactical squad "with the intention of making it impossible to find out who fired the fatal shot."

Leach said Tuesday that the guns were not assigned to specific men because two six-man squads relieved each other every two hours during the hostage-taking incident. He said the guns stayed in the room where the squad remained on duty.

Five spent shell casings were removed from the scene, said Leach, because all casings are normally dumped into the nearby Fraser River. He said the five casings were turned over to city police a month later, along with one of the six revolvers apparently used by the tactical squad.

Leach said a missing gun was turned in shortly after the incident by Guard Robert Orchison, a member of the tactical squad who had been assigned guard duties overlooking the scene of the shooting for several hours after the incident.

The missing gun was turned into the prison armory by Orchison, said Leech, and was later given to police.

Leach was asked if any of the three prisoners invovled in the hostage-taking incident — Andrew Bruce, Dwight Lucas and Claire Wilson — had made prior visits to the area where the incident took place in the classification area.

He said Bruce had visited Miss Steinhauser on five occasions the previous week. She was not Bruce's classification officer, he said.

Bruce did not have the required prison pass to visit the classification area June 9, when the hostage-taking began, said Leech, adding that Lucas had a pass and that it could have been forged.

The inquest continues Thursday.

BONES FOUND

CRESTON (CP) — Skeletal remains found on Creston flats near this West Kootenay community 60 miles north of Nelson have been identified as those of Alexander Hector Mackay who went missing more than five years ago. RCMP said bits of clothing, a boot and a watch were used by relatives to identify the remains. Mackay, 90 at the time of his death, left his house for a walk Dec. 13 ,1970 and was never seen again.

B.C. Rail Back on the Tracks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first freight trains in a month started moving out of B.C. Rail's yards Tuesday as United Transportation Union trainmen started obeying legislation ending their dispute with the crown company.

The company said about 91 of the 420 trainmen returned to work. The spokesman said the first freight train with 139 cars, mostly empties for offloading at mills along the line left North Vancouver about noon.

Another left an hour later and two more were due out Tuesday evening.

The workers have until Thursday to be back on the job under the Railway and Ferries Bargaining Assistance Act. The bill means binding arbitration for the UTU and imposes a 90-day cooling off period for disputes on the railway or ferries.

The railway said the return by trainmen was "very slow," but hoped the tempo will pick up today.

The freight service was shut down in mid-May because of a work-to-rule campaign conducted by the UTU in its bid for daily payment of overtime.

Glen Bowles, UTU spokesman, said the trainmen who return to work will continue "living by the rule of the book."

He said it will be up to the company to get the men back to work.

In its annual report issued Tuesday, the railway said carloadings increased 5.5% during 1975 over the previous year.

UBC Habitat Centre Costs $7 Million

VANCOUVER (CP) — The cost of the new human settlements centre at the University of B.C. will be $7 million, shared equally by the federal and provincial governments, a UBC spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said this cost will be spread over the five-year initial agreement that the university has with the U.N.

UBC will donate space and manpower to the new centre which will receive up to 10,000 Habitat documents and about 233 films and slide shows from more than 100 countries. The audio-visuals all depict solutions to human settlement problems.

UBC announced May 29 that the centre will be established at the Woodward Instructional Resources Centre. Included in it will be a UN audio-visual library on human settlements which would allow global access to the films by all groups involved in improving human settlements.

An interim agreement was signed Saturday by Habitat conference president Barney Danson and secretary-general Enrique Penalosa for the Habitat documents and films to go to UBC.

If the UN general assembly approves the interim agreement, the audio-visual library will hold the copyright of the films for five years.

PAPERS, UNIONS ACCEPT MEDIATOR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Press Ltd. tnd the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions agreed Tuesday to the appointment of a mediator in their current contract dispute after meeting with the Labor Relations Board.

Ed Peck, board vice-president, said the identity of the mediator would be released later.

Peck said that study sessions, which have disrupted production of the morning Province and evening Sun, both produced by Pacific Press, would stop immediately.

A formal hearing on a company complaint on whether the study sessions constitute illegal strikes was postponed indefinitely, he said. The hearing was to begin today.

Production of both newspapers was disrupted for about 10 days by study sessions held by unions to discuss technological change in a new contract with Pacific Press.

The company's 1,400 employees have been without a contract since Oct. 31, 1975.

The search for a mediator had been going on for some time. It was determined last week that neither Senator Carl Goldenberg of Montreal nor Clive McKee of Vancouver, both labor relations specialists, were available.

Technological change has been a central factor in the dispute, with the unions against giving up restrictive work practices.

Delivery Truck Fells Skyway Luggage Picket

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of a group of pickets who attempted to prevent a truck from leaving the strike-bound Skyway Luggage Company Monday was injured slightly by the slowly-moving truck.

Police identified the man as Jowan Bassra, 35.

They said he was one of 14 pickets who squeezed against the tractor unit of the truck, and that he fell to the ground screaming.

He was taken to Vancouver General Hospital by ambulance, where he was treated in the emergency department and released.

It was the latest incident in a lengthy dispute between the company and the Upholsterers' International Union. The vehicle was loaded with goods which the B.C.Federation of Labor has declared "Hot".

Police said the truck driver was attempting to drive away from the premises under instructions, and that the vehicle was moving at about one mile an hour when the incident occurred.

A union spokesman said the strikers intended to continue blocking trucks.

The strikers, most of whom are immigrant women from Italy, have been on strike for nine weeks to win increases in their near-minimum level wages.

Overseas Dialing On Way

B.C. Telephone subscribers in Vancouver will be able to dial direct to overseas countries by Sept. 7 if current schedules are met.

Ken Horodysky, information officer for the company in Victoria, said Tuesday that Victoria subscribers would not be able to dial direct overseas until early 1979, when the new operator-controlled automated traffic system was expected to be operational.

The new system, called Direct Dialling Overseas, will cost about $100,000 to install and will enable subscribers in Vancouver to dial direct to the United Kingdom, Germany, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Hong Kong and the Philippines initially.

The latest Vancouver telephone directory, published last month, has information on what overseas areas are hooked into the system and how to place DDO calls.

Edmonton, Calgary, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec City and Halifax are due to have the system operational within the next three years, and most major cities in Canada should be able to dial overseas direct by 1980, a spokesman for the Trans-Canada Telephone System said.

DDO requires an expansion of current telephone switching centres and construction of computerized systems which will cost more than $100 million nationally.

University Requested For Interior

VERNON (CP) — A degree-granting university should be established in south-central British Columbia, the Winegard Commission on Academic and Professional Programs in the Interior was told Tuesday.

The commission, headed by Dr. William Winegard, received 10 submissions here and they were unanimous in their call for a university in the area, with most favoring a permanent campus in Vernon.

Alderman William Halina presented a brief from council calling for "a quality of opportunity for interior youth."

He said that "anything less than a full university is not acceptable."

Other submissions generally agreed with the tone of a brief from the Vernon school board.

Later in Kelowna, Winegard heard an attack on the University of B.C. for the job it was doing on extension courses for interior students.

Sid Gowland, who spoke as a private citizen but is director of the evening division of the Okanagan College for the Kelowna area, said UBC "has done for us in the interior an extremely poor job in the field of university extension courses."

Simon Fraser University had been "a little better" and it was unfortunate that UBC did not show as much interest in providing extension courses, said Gowland.

Female Wages Rise

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of B.C. committee examining salary differences among male and female faculty members has recommended a number of female faculty salaries be increased. UBC president Dr. Douglas Kenny said Tuesday the recommended adjustments would cost less than $100,000 which had been budgeted for the results of the salary review.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Commencing on the day when each bridge player was born, he was taught to gather in the defender's trumps at his first opportunity, lest some catastrophe otherwise befall him, like an ace or king being trumped. This was sound general advice — but an undeviating adherence to this advice could be mose costly. Today's deal illustrates this latter point.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with his diamond ace, South cashed the ace and king of trumps. Although he was not aware of it at this point, he was now doomed to defeat. Next came the trump queen, picking up East's last trump. On this lead West discarded a diamond, while dummy tossed away a club.

Declarer next led the five of hearts, and when West played low, dummy's queen was put up. As is apparent, the queen won the trick.

It suddenly dawned on declarer that he couldn't return to the South hand to make another heart lead towards dummy's king, to make a winner out of that card. In desperation, he led a low club off the board, hoping that East possessed the ace. When East followed suit with the nine, South put up his king. West won with the ace and continued his attack on the diamond suit by leading the jack, which was taken by dummy's king. When play had ended, declarer had incurred a one-trick set, losing two clubs, one heart, and one diamond.

After winning the opening diamond lead, declarer should have cashed just one round of trumps. Next would come a heart lead, dummy's queen winning the trick. Now would come dummy's remaining trump to South's king, after which the trump queen would be cashed. South would then lead another heart, and whether West took his ace or not, the board's king of hearts would become a winner. With the diamond king serving as an entry, declarer would now be able to discard his losing diamond on the heart king.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 3455 for the game today. One 3, one 4 and two 5's. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial sfmbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers (no extra digits. For example, 35-4+5 is a solution for 36.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 136. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if desired.

TORONTO (CP) — There is no air cell in an egg at the moment it is laid, says the federal department of agriculture. The contents completely fill the shell. As soon as the egg cools, the contents contract. The slight vacuum draws air in through the porous shell to form an air space between shell membranes.

Egypt's Only Shooting War Waged Against Rabid Dogs

Washington Post

CAIRO — The sound of gunfire and the yelping of their puppy brought a British businessman and his wife rushing out of their villa near the pyramids. They were too late.

The puppy was dead. He had wandered outside the garden without his collar and had been shot by the police. He became another casualty of the only shooting war Egypt is currently waging — the war against rabies, one of the country's most persistent public health problems.

By government figures, police have killed more than 25,000 dogs in the past four months. The usual targets are not the inoculated family pets of foreigners and rich Egyptians but the bony, scruffy animals that roam in uncontrollable packs through the city streets and rural villages. The sound of shots is frequently heard in the evenings in Cairo's suburban neighborhoods as the police open fire on wandering dogs.

The ministry of health says that 42 persons died of rabies in Egypt last year, a figure that specialists say is probably low because many cases in rural areas are not reported.

More than 20,000 people were bitten by dogs and required to receive a series of antirabies injections. With the dog packs growing and the incidence of bites increasing, health officials asked the police to step up their efforts to get rid of potential carriers of the disease, for which no cure is known.

"It is cruel but what can we do?" asked Dr. Ahmed Ahkad, the health ministry's director of preventive medicine. "You can get rid of them by shooting or by poisoning, and poison is too dangerous."

"It's just so heartbreaking when it's your own dog," the businessman's wife said after the loss of the puppy. "My son was terribly upset.

"We come from England where there has been no rabies for 50 years and children are taught to play with any and all dogs. But we're all to blame for keeping dogs out here."

A minor panic broke out in Cairo's foreign community last year when a group of foreign children at a suburban girl scout meeting were nipped and licked by a puppy that turned out rabid.

Several children were evacuated by air to Europe for antirabies injections, a move that annoyed the Egyptians, who have been manufacturing and administering their own vaccine since 1907.

Canadian Fined In Guyana

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuter) — Canadian James Brown has been fined $400 by a magistrate's court on charges of unlawfully possessing ammunition, the Guyana Chronicle reported Tuesday.

Brown, 49, of Richmond, was charged after police found 16 .22-calibre bullets in his hotel room during a search May 21.

The court heard that while he denied knowing they were in his suitcase, he admitted the bullets were his property.

Price Of Oil To Drop

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The price of oil from Alaska's North Slope will drop to about $7 a barrel at the wellhead because of competition from foreign imports, the Oil and Gas Journal predicted Tuesday.

Imported oil from Indonesia and elsewhere is unloading at the West Coast at about $13 a barrel and North Slope oil must compete with it, the magazine says in its June 14 issue.

North Slope oil operators will have to subtract high transportation costs to compete with the imported oil. The pipeline tariff alone — due to the $7 billion cost of the North Slope project — will run about $4.50 a barrel, the magazine says.

From Valdez, on Alaska's south coast, tankers will carry the oil to West Coast ports, principally Long Beach, Calif., for between 50 cents and $1 a barrel.

The Journal says the transportation costs do not include $1 to $2 a barrel for moving the Alaskan oil to inland refineries in the Midwest and Southwest.

Satellite Photos Reveal Sinai Has Enough Water for Planting

By AHMED SHAWKI

CAIRO (AP) — Plumbing the desert sands from outer space, satellites have revealed the existence of water, oil, uranium and other minerals in the Egyptian Sahara and the Sinai Peninsula, an Egyptian scientist says.

Ahmed Abdel Hady said photographs taken by the satellites still are being analysed but preliminary indications show enough water in the Sinai Desert "to turn most of it green." Most of the Sinai still is occupied by the Israelis who seized it in 1967.

Abdel Hady heads a joint Egyptian-American scientific team in charge of the remote sensing project which has been receiving data from satellites and other space devices since 1972.

In addition to the desert potential, Abdel Hady said in an interview, previously unnoticed fertile areas near the Nile Valley could provide food for thousands of Egyptians.

Oklahoma State University and Michigan University, in co-operation with the Egyptian government, have a budget of $1.2 million annually for study of the untapped resources, Abdel Hady added. "Six images from satellites last year showed that the Sinai Peninsula has huge water, oil and mineral resources," Abdel Hady said.

"We photographed some 3,500 square miles in Sinai extending from the north to the south."

Shots showed three different areas rich with petroleum and natural gas, he added.

The first is the Gulf of Suez which already has proven oil reserves. The second is the Mediterranean offshore area in northern Sinai which has not yet been explored, and the third is a large area in southern Sinai marked by sedimentary rocks carrying natural gas, Abdel Hody said.

The highlands in Northern Sinai and the coastal strip of Wadi el Arish—totalling more than 2,000 square miles—conceal huge water potential, "enough to turn most of Sinai Desert green," Abdel Hady said.

Uranium also was detected in northwest and southern Sinai, said Abdel Hady.

Satellite images also showed significant food-growing potential in a 2,500-square-mile area adjacent to the Nile basin.

A study is under way to determine areas most suitable for cultivation to which Egyptians could move to help meet their food needs, he said.

Satellite images also were used to study a huge hydroelectric project proposed in the desert west of the Nile Valley.

The Quattara Depression project, if implemented, would give Egypt more than double the electric power provided now by the Aswan High Dam.

"In two months time Egypt will have maps of its entire territory showing food and mineral potentials," Abdel Hady said.

HARTBEESPOORT DAM, South Africa (CP) — Samantha Leopard and Satan Panther-Black have given birth to three of the rarest cubs in Africa. The cubs are spotty like their mother, but darker in color. Born at a private zoo, Samantha, who is tamer than Satan, guards them furiously. She allows only Jack Seales, owner of the park, near them.

RAILWAY WORKERS OVERRULE STRIKE

OTTAWA (CP)—Railway workers have voted to accept the terms of a conciliation report and keep the trains running.

Dick Smith, chief negotiator for 95,000 railway workers, ruled out the possibility of a country-wide rail strike Tuesday and said union negotiators will negotiate a contract settlement based on a conciliation report which recommends an 11-per-cent pay increase plus a cost-of-living adjustment clause in the first year of a new contract and an eight-per-cent increase in total compensation in the second year of the contract.

Labor Minister John Munro, who met Smith and other rail union heads for 1½ hours Tuesday, said he is confident the companies will negotiate on that basis "and the talks could be going again within a matter of days."

Last week, with a number of votes still outstanding, Smith said a preliminary count showed a slim majority of workers opposed the terms of the conciliation report. Rejection would have given union negotiators authority to set a strike date.

However, he said Tuesday "the final analysis shows that it was a majority acceptance and I would say now the possibility of a strike is nil."

He said 58 per cent of those eligible to vote cast ballots and of those, 54 per cent voted to accept conciliation commissioner Emmett Hall's recommendations.

The final tally showed that a majority of members in 10 of the 16 unions bargaining jointly through the Associated Railway Unions favored acceptance of the Hall report "and we have asked the minister of labor to find out whether the rail companies are prepared to sit down and negotiate."

Munro said he will pass the message to the 11 rail companies "and then I expect both sides will sit down and go at it."

The unions say the average wage for non-operating employees, who make up the bulk of the bargaining unit, is $5.50 an hour. The companies say when earnings of all 95,000 workers are considered, the earnings average out to $5.70 an hour.

Munro said Justice Hall, a former Supreme Court of Canada judge, deserves most of the credit for the break in the lingthy rail dispute.

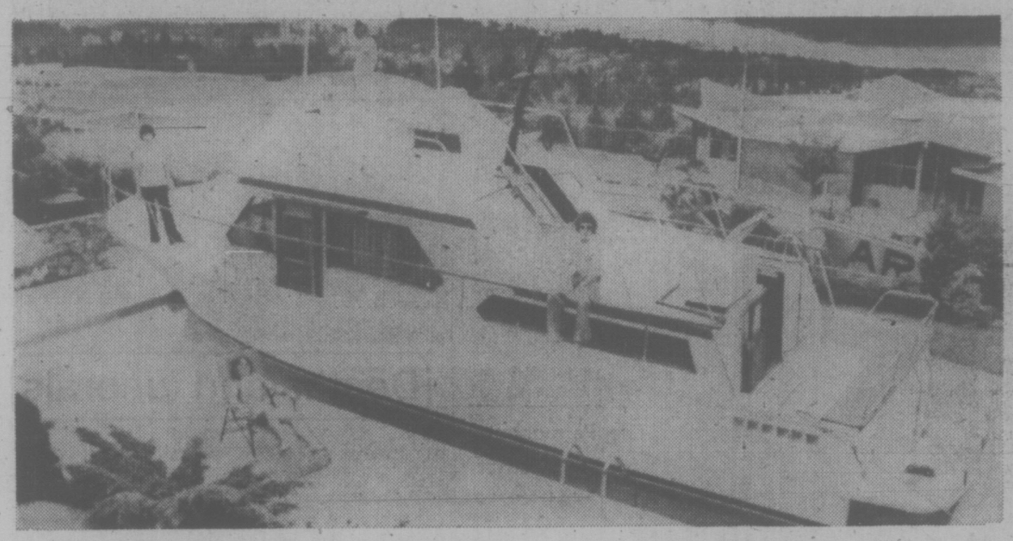
The union negotiators originally had asked for total compensation increases totalling 18.7 per cent in a one-year contract. The country's two largest rail companies, government-owned Canadian National Railways and privately-owned CP Rail, originally said a 9.3-per-cent increase was the maximum they could offer under federal guides.

Both sides have since modified their positions and they appeared close to agreement until April, when 150 general chairmen of the 16 unions rejected their negotiating committee's recommendation to accept the Hall report.

The general chairmen ordered a membership vote and recommended that workers oppose the Hall recommendations.

Mr. Justice Hall said in his report that his recommended settlement was within federal wage restraints. If the anti-inflation guides had not been in effect, he said he would have supported a one-year increase of 13 per cent.

Any settlement reached by the companies and unions must be approved by the federal anti-inflation board.



WHAT EVERY POOL NEEDS — a 40-foot cabin cruiser. George Jackson had been waiting four months for his new $130,000 cabin cruiser built at Canoe Cove and was determined to throw a christening party when it arrived. But the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club was already booked so he hired a 75-ton crane to hoist the boat into the swimming pool at his West Vancouver home and threw a party for about 135 guests. The boat is being moved to better cruising waters later this week.

City Speedup Pledged On Heritage Houses

Victoria city council will make every effort to speed up the process of designating heritage buildings to ensure they are not threatened by demolition, Mayor Mike Young said Tuesday.

His comment to reporters followed a meeting lasting nearly three hours between aldermen and members of the city's Heritage Advisory Committee, where several proposals for strengthening the city's heritage conservation efforts were discussed.

Young summed up the discussion by saying that the main need is for the city to "caucus" agendas, will be resuscitated. Among them are properties on Belleville, Fisgard, Amelia and Store Streets.

Meanwhile, the committee has prepared a special brief outlining proposals for a group of heritage buildings on Fort Street.

There was some difference of opinion between council and heritage committee representatives on the most effective form of deterrent against the illegal demolition of a designated heritage home.

Committee chairman Martin Segger, an architectural historian, suggested that in cases where developers knock down heritage buildings without a valid demolition permit, the land should remain "undevelopable" and no building permit issued.

But aldermen generally felt that would be impracticable because it would also punish the community by inflicting on it a "sterile" site in perpehave "more elbow room" in its heritage program, through broader enabling powers granted by the B.C. government.

There could be a lengthy wait for legislative reform, he said, but meanwhile, the city could make maximum use of its heritage protection capabilities by designating as many buildings as possible as heritage structures.

Such a designation imposed by bylaw prevents the building in question from being altered or demolished without the city's approval.

Suggestions for several designations, put forward by the Heritage Advisory Committee several months ago but somehow mislaid on council's tuity.

Young said a cash penalty would be far more effective. "Anywhere from $10,000 to $25,000 would be enough to make them think twice," he said.

NATO Eyes Red Exercise

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Norway, a member of NATO, is among five countries who are watching by invitation Soviet military manoeuvres involving ground and air forces of 25,000 men, Tass news agency reported today.

The exercise, code named "Sever" North, is being staged in Soviet Karelia, near the border with Finland.

The other countries with observers are Sweden and Finland, both neutral, and the Soviet Union's Warsaw pact allies, East Germany and Poland.

Tass said the Soviet Union is seeking to fulfil the spirit and letter of the final declaration at last year's European security conference in Helsinki, which included a proposal for invitations to observers to be made voluntarily.

Olympic Stadium On Schedule

MONTREAL (CP) — Final touches to the main Olympic stadium are on schedule as the city prepares for the Games opening July 17, says the Olympic installations board.

Workers have installed about 42,000 of the 56,000 permanent seats in the stadium and began putting in temporary seats at ground level Tuesday.

The stadium was turned over to the Olympic organizing committee Sunday.

The installations board reports the field lighting system on the mezzanine level has been completed and that about 75 per cent of the roof cover has been put in place.

Blue-Tongue Quarantine

OTTAWA (CP) — A quarantine is being imposed on southern British Columbia cattle, sheep and goats to prevent further spreading of blue-tongue disease, the federal agriculture department announced Tuesday.

The first suspected case of blue-tongue, a virus that is spread by biting flies and makes it difficult for livestock to eat, was first found in mid-March.

The release said that until then, Canada was considered to be free of blue-tongue and the appearance of the virus is disrupting export sales.

Shortly after the discovery of the first suspected case, the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand put an embargo on importing Canadian sheep and cattle as well as on importing semen from those animals.

Canada has also tested more than 7,000 head of cattle in the affected area to try to determine how widespread the disease is.

Native Rights Groups Eye Help from Outside Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The Native Council of Canada is putting out feelers for international aid to pay legal costs if it has to take the federal government to court over aboriginal rights.

The council has been making preliminary contact with all types of international sources, including the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Fred Jobin, council secretary-treasurer, said in an interview Monday.

"We have to see where the money lies and what strings are attached," he said.

The council represents non-status Indians and Metis and is pushing the federal government to recognize the aboriginal rights of these people. It estimates more than one million Canadians are direct descendants of the original native people.

Jobin said if Ottawa does not recognize their aboriginal rights, the council will initiate court actions aimed at winning control over various tracts of land throughout Canada.

Non-status Indians and Metis are not covered by treaties and therefore are not the direct responsibility of the federal government. But they said they also have special aboriginal rights, including claims to land they have occupied traditionally.

They want aboriginal rights based on blood lines, not on what they call an artificial definition of who is and who is not an Indian under the Indian Act.

The prime minister's office has promised a reply to the demands by the end of this month. A cabinet committee studied the matter last week and is expected to discuss it again this week.

The council also wants Ottawa to provide financing for researching non-status Indian claims. One council spokesman has estimated this would cost $12 million.

The approaches for international aid are preliminary and are designed to find out who is willing to give money.

For instance, said Jobin, some of the oil exporting countries might be willing to assist the council in developing a land claim.

If the claim was successful, the participating country would receive a return on its investment through projects developed after a land claim settlement.

Indians and Inuit in the North are negotiating such settlements and plan to establish large businesses with the money and land they receive for extinguishing their claims.

Wholesaler Nabbed

ROME (Reuter) — A leading food wholesaler was kidnapped outside his home early today, less than 24 hours after police freed a meat dealer who had been abducted by urban guerrillas.

Police said they do not know whether the kidnapping of 52-year-old Renato Penteriani was politically motivated or for ransom.

Urban guerrillas who kidnapped beef baron Giuseppe d'Ambrosio had demanded a "revolutionary" sale of 71 tons of beef at a third of the normal price as a condition for his release. He was found unharmed in a deserted convent Tuesday. The guerrillas had threatened to kill him unless Rome authorities sold cheap beef to the people.

Penteriani controls much of Rome's poultry and egg trade. He also deals in other foodstuffs.

Police said he was leaving his home with his brother-in-law, who owns a chain of food shops, when they were confronted by three or four men wearing hoods and carrying sub-machine-guns.

Penteriani was forced into a car and driven off at high speed. His brother-in-law, Giovanni Chirico, gave chase in his truck but lost the car.

3 Coho Boats Beat Season

Three Canadian fishing vessels were apprehended off Vancouver Island early Monday with coho in their holds, long before the season opened at midnight that day.

The boats were escorted into Port Renfrew by the fisheries patrol vessel Atlin Port, commanded by Capt. Bob Walker.

Sooke fisheries officer Larry Duke said today 817 pounds of coho were seized.

He said charges involving fishing before the opening of the season will be laid under the British Columbia Fishery Regulations.

The three vessels are Ross Burkholder's White Lady of Port Alberni, Edward Almas' Pacific Prowler of Nanoose Bay and Gordon Woodliffe's Rendal of Vancouver.

The vessels were apprehended by the Atlin Post in the early hours of Monday about 80 miles off the west coast of Vancouver Island and about 40 miles from the U.S. border.

They have now returned to the fishing grounds.

Duke said it could be between 30 and 60 days before charges are laid and the fishermen appear in Victoria provincial court.

The coho season for the east coast of Vancouver Island opens midnight June 30.

Britain Sitting On Powder Keg Of Race Tension

LONDON (AP) — Britain faces a long hot summer of racial tension that already has produced clashes in several cities. Five men—three non-whites and two whites — have been killed in London in the last three weeks.

"The situation is like a powderkeg," said Ravi Jain, leader of the National Association of Indian Youth. "All it needs is a match."

There is a nationwide surge of sentiment against black and brown immigrants from former colonies because of fears that the economically troubled country will be swamped by them. White rightists of the militant National Front and colored youths supported by white leftists have battled in London, Bradford, Blackburn and other cities.

"We're afraid to walk on the streets," said one militant Asian. "We don't advocate violence, but if it comes to our door we won't turn our backs on it"

Two weeks ago, police battled with young Asian rioters in Southall, a West London district where half the 50,000 population is Asian, after whites stabbed a young Sikh to death. Angry Asians later marched through the streets chanting "We want blood!"

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, condemned recent demonstrations against colored immigrants as "a disgrace to Britain, likely to do incalculable harm to community relations."

"We're racing against time," Cmdr Peter Marshall, head of Scotland Yard's community-relations division, said in an interview.

Syed Alav Rasul, general-secretary of the standing conference of Asian organizations, warned: "We may not be able to keep the lid on in Asian communities indefinitely in the face of violent racialist attacks."

Sir Robert Mark, London's police commissioner, warned last week that black militants in the British capital are becoming more violent, and that white policemen are their main targets.

West Indian activists in London's ghettoes told a parliamentary committee on race relations that police are provoking hostility and that an explosion of violence is not far off.

"We've reached the point of no return," one of them said. "There are no further last straws. The police are racially prejudiced. They're the enemy."

Britain has about two million non-white Asians, West Indians and Africans. This is only 3.2 per ccent of the total population of 56 million, but most of them are concentrated in London and such industrial cities as Birmingham, Coventry, Manchester and Leeds.

Since the Second World War, when non-whites from Commonwealth countries began flocking to Britain, there have been periodic outbursts of racial hostility.

Trouble has been brewing for years in the black ghettoes, especially in London, because of discrimination in jobs, housing and education. Unemployment among young blacks is about 20 per cent, twice the rate for young whites. The police say the crime rate is rising alarmingly.

Scotland Yard reported that street crime in Lambeth, London's biggest black district, tripled in five years to nearly 1,000 robberies and muggings in 1974. The report said young blacks committed 80 per cent of the crimes and that 85 per cent of their victims were white.

The current crisis began two months ago when James Callaghan succeeded Sir Harold Wilson as prime minister. Non-whites consider Callaghan hostile to them because he restricted immigration when he was home secretary six years ago.

On becoming prime minister, he fired Alex Lyon as home office minister in charge of immigrant affairs. Immigrants regarded Lyon as a friend, and he said he was fired because he "tried to get justice for the blacks."

Tension rose perceptibly after a confidential foreign office report predicting a wave of Asian immigrants was leaked to ultrarightist politician Enoch Powell, a long-time crusader against non-white immigration.

The arrival last month of several hundred Asian refugees from Malawi increased the anger of lower-class whites fearing competition for scarce jobs. Tempers were raised more when the government housed several of the Asian families temporarily in a $600-a-week hotel at public expense.

Although immigration laws have been tightened up in the last few years to slow down the flow of non-whites, an estimated 50,000 came last year. Most had British passports or relatives living here. The foreign office report said that up to 250,000 Asians are waiting to come; it gave no estimate for the blacks in Africa and the West Indies.

3 Unions Vie For Managers At B.C. Tel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three unions are seeking to represent 1,800 supervisory managers at the B.C. Telephone Co.

Waiting for the Canada Labor Relations Board to make a decision are the Society of Telephone Engineers and Managers (STEM), the Telephone Supervisors Association of B.C. (TSA) and the federation of Telephone Workers of B.C.

The federal board has already decided in a test case that four levels of marketing managers at B.C. Tel are "employees" under terms of the Canada Labor Code and are eligible for collective bargaining rights.

Farrell Hopwood, STEM president, said his group has always claimed that only one bargaining unit should be selected for the supervisors.

"The TSA people are only concerned with foremen, and the federation wants us all without recruiting or signing a single supervisor", Hopwood said.

He suggested the labor board may have to call a vote among the supervisors to decide the issue.

DRAW UNHURT BY POST-SALE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Lottery officials say publicity over the post-purchase of a winning ticket in the Manitoba government's bi-weekly Western Express hasn't reduced demand for tickets, but measures taken to reduce the chances of it happening again have cut back this week's draw to three series from four.

A spokesman for the Western Canada Lottery Foundation, which administers the draw for the provincial government, said four series of tickets already are in circulation for the succeeding draw June 30.

There are 90,000 tickets to a series and two series were offered when the lottery began earlier this year. Because of increased demand, ticket sales grew to three series and reached four series for the first time in the June 2 draw.

The bearer-type tickets cost $1 each. The top three prizes are $50,000, $20,000 and $10,000 with subsidiary prizes ranging from $1,000 down to $25.

Tickets are sold in sealed pouches of five to retailers, who may return pouches for refunds up to seven days after the draw. Speculators who think the winning number has not been sold can gamble on post-purchases of $5 packages within this period.

This happened in the three-series May 16 draw when a couple of days went by with no claim for the ticket number 61538 in Series 3.

A Winnipeg group began buying tickets still in the hands of retailers. Their identities, number or the amount of their purchases was not disclosed, but they came up with the $50,000 winner.

Helping them in their gamble was the fact all pouches contained tickets of a single series with the series number printed on the outside, so they could avoid Series 1 and 2.

Health Minister Larry Desjardins, responsible for the lottery, ruled that future ticket pouches must contain combinations of all series.

The lotteries foundation spokesman said it was possible only to scramble three series for the June 16 draw. For June 30, Series 4 will still be in separate pouches but without an identifying number. Subsequent pouches will contain combinations of all series.

The spokesman said a similar system prevails in the older and larger Wintario lottery after which the Western Express is patterend.

Plan to Kill Wife 'Came in Flash' Court Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charles Eichman of Tallahassee, Fla., told the British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday that an idea to eliminate his wife to save himself from being destroyed came over him "in a flash."

Eichman, 38, is charged with attempted murder after the beating of Cora Eichman, 49, of Vancouver in the garage of her apartment March 31, 1975.

Eichman, who pleaded not guilty, was studying for a doctorate in criminology at the time of the incident. While on bail he completed his studies and last week received his degree.

Mrs. Eichman, at the time an associate professor at the University of British Columbia, suffered severe brain damage and now is confined to a Regina hospital where she requires total nursing care.

Eichman gave himself up to FBI in Atlanta, Ga., two days after writing three suicide letters. One was a letter to police in which he analysed his thoughts and actions before and after the alleged attempted murder.

Defence counsel Terry Robertson told Mr. Justice W. A. Craig that one of the defences for Eichman would be that of insanity at the time.

Eichman said Tuesday that he made the decision to end his wife's life after listening to a dialogue within himself which followed nights of torment in which he saw his wife's demand for a divorce as wrecking his opportunity to achieve the doctorate in criminology for which he had worked for 10 years.

He told the jury the decision left him with a strange calm and serenity that remained until he struck the first blow.

Eichman testified it was his plan in that state of mind to render her unconscious with one considerate blow, then take her up to her apartment and drown her in her bathtub and flee. But a trickle of blood from her lips and her moan caused him to panick and he abandoned his plan to kill her.

Eichman said the sounds of her apparent suffering became too much for him and he administered more blows to induce the unconsciousness he had first planned. He left her in the parkade at a spot where he believed she would be seen quickly and receive immediate medical aid, he said.

"It's hard to believe, but I loved my wife very much," said Eichman.

Cartoon of King May Mean Ban

MADRID (WP) — The Spanish government is threatening the country's biggest newsweekly with a four-month suspension, ostensibly for publishing a cartoon showing King Juan Carlos dancing on the skyscrapers of New York, according to authoritative sources.

"Demeaning" the chief of state is still considered a press crime in Spain, where newspapers and magazines remain controlled by law.

The threat to close "Cambio 16," which has a weekly circulation of 400,000, has divided the cabinet, sources said. The 33-year-old monarch, recently back from a visit to Washington and New York, has been advised of the possible suspension, informants added.

Banning the widely read magazine at this time would tarnish the image of a new and more liberal Spain that the king and his ministers have been trying to project.

The decision against Cambio 16 is not yet final, but the magazine's editors toned down a recent editorial to avoid another confrontation with censors and hostile government officials, sources remarked.

The newsweekly, with a small circulation only three years ago, has been in constant trouble with the government ever since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco last November.

Two U.S. Diplomats Killed in Lebanon

Times News Services

The U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, a second American diplomat and their chauffeur were killed in Beirut today, White House officials said.

The Red Cross reported it had found the three bodies, the officials added.

Word the bodies had been found was sent to President Ford while he was in a White House conference with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, CIA director George Bush and others discussing the earlier reported disappearance of Ambassador Francis Meloy and diplomat Robert Waring.

Ford, Kissinger, Bush and the others in the White House meeting spent about 50 minutes more in discussion before dispersing.

Kissinger emerged from the session with a grim expression on his face and only a curt nod to reporters waiting in the sun outside the White House west wing executive office entrance.

Meloy is the fourth U.S. official to vanish in Beirut in less than a year. The other three were kidnapped and, after lengthy detentions, released.

The Palestine Liberation Front, which was implicated in the earlier kidnaps, has denied any knowledge of today's incident.

Meanwhile, for the first time in weeks, neither Moslem nor Christian broadcasts in Beirut made any mention of fighting anywhere in Lebanon.

The lull followed announcements by Arab mediators that Syria will lift its blockade of Beirut and other coastal cities and that Lebanese Christian leaders have given conditional approval to a pan-Arab peacekeeping force for their country.

However, in Damascus, a senior Syrian official called Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat "a fool" and warned that his continued opposition to Syria is damaging the Palestinian cause.

In one of the most open declarations to date of the Palestinians' long reliance on Syria as a base of operations against Israel, the official, who declined to be identified, said:

"Arafat really is a fool — any Palestinian leader who stands against Syria is not only a fool, but is acting against the Palestinian cause. For without Syria there is no Palestine.

Six Killed, 33 Hurt As Blacks Rampage

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — At least six people were killed today when police clashed with 10,000 black high school students in a segregated township just outside the city.

At least 33 people were admitted to hospital, 19 of them with bullet wounds, in the wake of what one source called "the biggest anti-government demonstration in years."

There are fears that the rioting may spread from the Soweto township, home for more than one million blacks where the students are protesting mandatory use of Afrikaans in the schools.

He said houses, cars and other property was being burned and stoned.

Some of the pupils were reported to have seized a policeman as a hostage to order police to withdraw from the riot area.

The rioting began when high school pupils began gathering at several points in Soweto to march on Phefeni Junior Secondary High School, focus of a five-week protest by some 800 Soweto pupils against the use of Afrikaans.

All available police in the Soweto area and a large number of reinforcements from Johannesburg rushed to the area.

Witnesses said the police fired into the air in efforts to scatter the mobs, but the pupils regrouped and began throwing rocks, breaking the windows of police cars.

The police pulled back and positioned themselves at the nearby Orlando police station.

Many of the pupils speak Afrikaans with difficulty and it is widely regarded as the language of white oppression.

AMIN 'FAKED' DEATH PLOT

Manchester Guardian

DAR ES SALAAM — There was no attempt last week on the life of Ugandan President Idi Amin, according to well-informed sources in Kampala.

Radio Uganda had reported that three hand grenades "of the type used by Israel and the United States" had been hurled at Amin last Thursday while he was reviewing a graduation-parade at a police academy near Kampala.

Reliable Ugandan government sources say that the whole thing was a hoax put together by Amin and his staff.

Sources who were present at the Neambya police barracks said that Amin's bodyguard opened fire on the crowd without provocation.

One source, who was near the president at the time, said that a dud hand grenade was tossed but it was not aimed at Amin.

The source said he believes it was a signal for the body guard to begin firing.

Eyewitnesses said that Amin also participated in the shooting.

The sources said that Amin staged the incident for three reasons.

The first is that he had heard rumors circulating in Kampala about a planned coup for early next month when Organization of African Unity heads of state meet in Mauritius.

The second reason, the sources said, was to demonstrate his supernatural ability to survive to the Ugandan populace.

The third reason was to do away with certain people present at the parade. Sources could not specify which.

Controllers Warned On Strike

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A strike by air traffic controllers over the use of French at airports would be "illegal" and if it came the government would "act accordingly," Treasury Board president Jean Chretien said Tuesday.

He would not reveal what action government would take but said "we will see" when asked if a court injunction would be obtained to block a walkout.

CATCA President Jim Livingston said the results of a current strike vote would be known on Saturday and that, if positive, the strike would be called for Monday.

BUS PASSES OFFERED TO UVIC STUDENTS

A bus pass will be offered to University of Victoria students in September, costing $30 for three months and covering any number of bus rides during that period.

The student pass is an experiment worked out by university and B.C. Hydro and will be assessed at year-end to see whether it will be extended over the spring term.

With bus fares at 25 cents, the student is ahead with the pass if he or she uses the bus more than 10 trips a week, Peter Darling, senior management consultant at the university, said today.

He said pressure from students for some sort of transit assistance was accentuated by car insurance rate increases earlier this year. Several bus lines serve the campus.

In addition, the university has a shortage of parking space and hopes the pass will stimulate bus use and ease that difficulty.

The pass will be available to students when they register in September and will cover the period Sept. 13 to Dec. 17, he said.

Air Canada Debt $14M Already?

OTTAWA (CP) — The auditor general of Canada should conduct an immediate audit into the Air Canada finance branch in Winnipeg, Dan McKenzie (PC — Winnipeg South Centre) said in the house Tuesday.

During the first four months of this year the government owned airline, he said, has recorded a deficit of $14.5 million or $2 million more than the airline's total deficit of $12.5 million for last year.

McKenzie told the commons a financial analysis for Touche Ross and Company has found that if Air Canada had "realistic accounting" applied to it the airline's loss last year would have been around $100 million.

The Winnipeg member said conflicting reports were published in the Winnipeg Free Press Saturday edition regarding the financial problems of Air Canada.

McKenzie said an Air Canada public relations official had denied that problems in the finance branch existed.

"This is in direct conflict with the findings of the Estey Report and known cases of financial mismanagement of the Air Canada finance branch," said the member.

Mulek Plans Going Ahead

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The developer of Victoria's most-criticized highrise, the View Towers building at View and Quadra, is preparing plans for a further development on the site — nearly four years after he was refused a building permit for a second tower.

Vancouver developer George Mulek confirmed Tuesday that proposals are being worked out, but said he could not indicate how long it will be before he is able to submit plans to City Hall.

"We have always been planning on building the second phase," he added, but declined to give any further information.

After a lapse of so many years since the first stage of the development, a 19-storey low-rental apartment, was built, many Victoria residents apparently believed that the rest of the project had been abandoned.

But a city planning official said the property is too big and valuable, and Mulek has too much invested in it, for him to pull out half-way through.

The official confirmed that Mulek has telephoned City Hall a couple of times in the past few weeks to discuss the completion of the development.

"He has been trying to sift through his prospects and possibilities," he said. "Mr. Mulek has asked us what the frames of reference would be for completing the development, and he has talked about coming over to see us with his architect."

Mayor Mike Young, who in his days as an alderman once told Mulek that the only thing he could do to improve the appearance of the 19-storey apartment tower was to "paint it with invisible paint," also said Tuesday he had heard of the developer's renewed interest.

Young said if and when Mulek approaches the city with fresh proposals, council will "treat him as a gentle-

Mail Bomb Extortion Widens

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — FBI Director Clarence Kelley said Tuesday that a series of letter bombs mailed to corporate offices apparently are part of a scheme to extort millions of dollars from 200 business firms around the U.S.

And envelopes filled with ticks, possibly disease-bearing, may be part of the same plot.

Thirteen bombs, contained in Manila envelopes, were delivered Monday to seven corporations and the homes of five corporate executives. The recipients were in five different cities or their immediate suburbs.

A 14th letter bomb, believed to be part of the same wave of mailings, was received Tuesday at the Combined Insurance Co. of America office in Worthington, Ohio, a suburb of Columbus.

"Over a period of several months, numerous large corporations in the United States have received a series of extortion letters wherein demands have been made for large sums of money to be paid with the threat of terrorist tactics unless these demands were met," Kelley said.

FBI scientists are investigating the possibility a batch of ticks mailed in a plain brown envelope to an insurance firm were infected with a variety of deadly diseases.

The ticks were discovered Tuesday, 24 hours after they arrived at the regional office of Combined Insurance Co. of America. They were mailed in an envelope similar to the ones which delivered the letter bombs.

B.C. May Look to Courts In Revenue Cuts Protest

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — The B.C. government might challenge in court the federal government's unilateral decision to end a $800 million program of revenue guarantees to the provinces, Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday.

Bennett said upon his return from the two-day first ministers' conference in Ottawa that the unexpected federal announcement near the end of the meeting Tuesday afternoon caused "stunned silence" in the meeting room.

The premier said he did not angrily walk out of the meeting before it ended, as some reports had indicated. He said he wouldn't let the late development "influence the relationship between B.C. and Ottawa."

The federal move, which had been proposed to the Canadian premiers earlier this year — and rejected by them — will cost B.C. about $60 million.

"What this means is our taxpayers will have to do without $60 million in service," Bennett said, and Ottawa's position has made it "hard for the provinces to have confidence in future agreements they make with the federal government."

The four-year-old revenue guarantee program, involving the transfer of about $800 million, was established to give the provinces compensating payments to offset financial losses caused by federal tax reforms in 1972.

The provinces had been told they would suffer no financial loss because of the changes.

Bennett said federal finance minister Donald MacDonald's announcement Tuesday put a dampening effect on what otherwise had been a successful conference.

He said constitutional law experts of the B.C. government attended the meeting and would begin work on a possible court challenge of the federal move.

"If there had been some rationalization then, we probably wouldn't be so angry," Bennett said. "But what Mr. MacDonald said certainly didn't persuade me."

He said the decision will have a mihimal effect on the province's current $3.6 billion budget because the first instalment to B.C. — about $13 million — was due this year.

Bennett said major strides had been made towards agreement on federal-provincial cost-sharing programs for health and education.

He said the discussion on bringing the Canadian constitution home from England was described by many premiers as the "best ever."

PRICE CHECK?

Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday he has asked his staff to examine what actions the province could take to control food prices because he has been dissatisfied with the performance of the federal Anti-Inflation Board in controlling them. A provincial food prices review board might be set up, he said, but it might be too expensive and impractical to operate.

Dumping Board Boss Accused

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Progressive Conservatives Tuesday demanded an investigation into the possible conflict of interest of a public servant whom they said tried to sell everything from frozen fish to Swedish rifle sights.

Elmer MacKay, the Nova Scotia MP whose revelations started the Sky Shops affair, demanded an investigation under the federal Inquiries Act of J. P. C. Gauthier, chairman of the federal anti-dumping tribunal.

MacKay told reprters that documents he has uncovered apparently show that Gauthier put himself in an unacceptable position in conducting business while he was on the tribunal.

The anti-dumping tribunal is a federal agency charged with preventing products from being dumped on the Canadian market at prices lower than those charged in the country of manufacture.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said that Mr. Gauthier officially retired as tribunal chairman last December "with the intention of taking on a new career" but stayed on an extra six months at the request of the government.

"He did indicate to me that he would be undertaking another career which would not be in conflict with his present responsibilities, but that he would discharge his responsibilities as chairman . . . until the end of this month," Macdonald said.

MacKay had asked if the government felt that according to the provisions of the Anti-Dumping Act, the chairman should "devote his full time and attention to his official position and refrain from commercial activities of a private or personal nature for his own benefit or the benefit of associates."

MacKay told the Commons that Gauthier "has been ac-

Thrifty Homes Still?

It is still the aim of the provincial government to see "moderate or affordable" housing built on a more-than-four-acre property south of Hillside Avenue in Victoria, Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

Curtis told the legislature his department will welcome proposals for development of the Mount Stephen site, either on an ownership or rental basis. And among the groups invited to apply is the Mount Stephen Co-op, whose earlier plan to develop there was killed by the previous government.

The minister was replying to a series of questions from Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) who pointed out last week that the government was proposing to sell the land to developers for more than three times the price it paid the city of Victoria less than two years ago.

The city sold the property to the province for $190,000. Under the housing department's proposal call it is now advertised for $600,000.

Barber said the move was a breach of faith with the city, which felt it had been cheated. But Curtis' statement in the house on Tuesday night included no apologies for the price increase.

He told reporters later he had received no complaints on the matter from Mayor Mike Young or any Victoria residents. The $400,000-plus price increase merely reflected the assessed value of the land, he said.

Curtis said he regretted this escalation in value, but MLAs would agree that "to sell it at far less than the present market value would confer an enormous windfall profit to the new owners. And we are not prepared to do that."

He added that the profits would not go into revenues but into the housing department's revolving fund to provide more housing in Victoria and elsewhere in B.C.

Earlier Tuesday, Victoria's land management committee urged city council to demand that the government produce a clear explanation of what it intends to do with the property, and settle the price question before it proceeds any further.

Ald. Bob Wright said if the government sold the land for $600,000 it could be accused of being a "ripoff developer and rapacious entrepreneur."

City planning director Geoff Greenhalgh pointed out that if the government were to forego the $400,000 profit, the 60 units originally planned for the site would be lowered in price by about $6,600 each.

SLOW DRIVER CRACKDOWN PLANNED

Traffic along the twisty Island Highway and on other provincial roads should flow a little easier this summer — there's going to be a crackdown on slow drivers who hold up other vehicles.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser said recently the section of the Motor Vehicle Act that allows for charges against drivers impeding others behind them will be enforced by the RCMP.

Sgt. Murray Brown of the RCMP Victoria subdivision traffic section said Tuesday it was not the intention of police to charge people who drive too slowly but only those who don't pull over to the side and let those who wish to travel faster pass by.

Fraser said as another measure to reduce lineups which lead to passing accidents the department will increase pull-out areas along highways.

No Drop In Deaths On Island

Reduced speed limits may have been a major factor in decreasing highway deaths in British Columbia as a whole but it doesn't seem to have made much difference on Vancouver Island.

According to Sgt. Murray Brown of the RCMP traffic section, there were just as many fatal accidents (36) and an increase in number killed (42, up from 40) in the first five months this year as the same period in 1974 when the higher speed limits were in effect.

The statistics cover only those parts of the Island serviced by the RCMP and do not include municipalities with their own police forces such as Greater Victoria.

Brown said the year-end tally for 1975 was lower than the 1974 — 77 fatal accidents with 95 deaths, down from 98 and 109 respectively.

The death toll for the province, however, has dropped much more markedly, Brown said. He noted that for the first five months of 1976, there were 155 fatal accidents with 194 deaths compared with 205 fatal accidents and 239 deaths for the same period in 1974.

The RCMP's full-year totals show 753 persons killed in 1974 traffic accidents compared with 619 in 1975.

In some parts of the province, notably the Fraser Valley Freeway, the drop has been dramatic.

Staff-Sgt. Max Hochstetter, RCMP district traffic supervisor on the Lower Mainland, said there hasn't been a single fatality so far this year on the Highway 401 section from Langley to Vancouver. In 1975 six deaths were recorded on this section of highway and in 1974 there were 22.

He said the figures appeared to be clear evidence of the effect of the provincial government decision to lower highway speed limits in late 1974.

"I'd also like to think that good selective enforcement and highway patrols were involved in the accident decrease and the saving of lives," Hochstetter added.

Cyclist Injured In Collision

A 15-year-old Victoria boy was treated and released from Victoria General Hospital Tuesday after his bicycle struck a car on Burnside near Finlayson.

Police said Jagtar Bains of 508 Cecelia received bruises when he rode into a car that was backing out of a driveway onto the road.

Ferry Parking Studied

B.C. Ferry Authority has explored alternative public parking for its jammed-up Swartz Bay terminal but as yet lacks authority to proceed.

Terminal superintendent Frank Ramsay said Transport Minister Jack Davis would consider the question of additional parking, which has been noticeably short since the summer tourist season began and higher ferry rates went into effect June 1.

Part of the problem appears to stem from the fact that more people heading for the mainland are leaving their cars at the terminal rather than driving on board ferries, apparently preferring to ride the bus on the other side than pay doubled automobile tariffs.

But there are only 300 public pay parking spaces available within the terminal property, which Ramsay says falls about 200 spaces short during peak periods.

He said all land now held by the authority at Swartz Bay is committed for terminal purposes and any additional parking area would have to be purchased. At today's prices, the cost could be comparable with constructing tiered parking on the existing lot.

North Saanich Mayor Paul Grieve said he felt 100 additional spaces could be provided on land already held by the authority and that this could be done at relatively low cost.

He suggested this move would take the pressure off nearby roads where parking is illegal and many motorists have found their cars towed away after returning from the mainland.

Grieve puts the onus for more parking on the government and justified the removal of cars parked illegally on narrow intersecting roads just outside the terminal.

He said when cars line the sides of Canoe Cove and Dolphin roads, fire trucks cannot get through readily, and he cites the marinas at the foot of each road as having a high priority in case of emergency.

RCAMP concur with the mayor and cite complaints from residents of the two roads when ferry patrons line them with parked cars.

A Sidney resident, John McVie, said there are insufficient signs to warn drivers of the tow-away zones and nothing to tell a motorist who has lost his car where he can find it.

Grieve said the municipality will post signs telling where to locate towed away cars, although he observed such a step is unneccessary in the city where there are dozens of tow-away zones.

Ads to Say B.C. Ferries Now Normal

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government will launch a special advertising campaign immediately to assure tourists the ferries are operating normally, Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf said today.

He said the decision was made by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, who is in charge of the provincial department of travel, and Transport Minister Jack Davis following a meeting between Davis and a delegation of Victoria merchants Tuesday.

The advertising campaign wil ble centred on the lower mainland but will include Seattle and the interior of B.C. as well.

A second request from the Victoria merchants, that the ferry fares be reduced, was rejected by Davis on the grounds the ferries will lose $25 million this year even if the vessels carry big loads at the present fares.

The advertising campaign will be under way within the next 10 days because the provincial government is aware that Victoria has basically a 100-day tourist season that is already under way.

While there was a need for the advertising campaign, reports that vehicle traffic is down 33 per cent since June 1 have been taken out of context, Bawlf said.

"For the first three or four days of the month there was a concern the ferries may go on strike at any time and the traffic dropped to almost nothing. On some trips you could count the number of cars on one hand.

"Even if the ferries had been operating at 100 per cent in the past few days, the statistics would show a decline because of the first three or four days when the vessels were almost empty."

He said there is evidence traffic is returning to normal patterns.

Bawlf was present at the meeting Tuesday when Davis met a delegation led by Gerry Splatt, general manager of the Royal London Wax Museum.

Splatt today said he was pleased the government has agreed to launch the advertising campaign and said the tourist flow could match last year's levels if it is successful.

Traffic flow on the Marguerite, the Coho and Washington State Ferries is about the same as last year, he said.

"The big decline had been on the B.C. Ferries.

"If we could solve that problem, we could have a satisfactory year after all."

He said the main resistance to the ferry fare increases would come from nearby areas where people have been paying low rates for 16 years. Now they know the rate has been doubled.

While the delegation would have liked to have seen some action on the question of ferry fares, they were generally pleased with the meeting with Davis, Splatt said.

Meanwhile, Davis today said there was little chance the government would offer free rides to everyone on the B.C. Ferries despite a study of the question under way by Dr. William Hughes, a research director for the provincial transport department.

Davis said Hughes is studying all aspects of the ferry system and all possible fare combinations. But with the service operating at a loss there is little possibility of a reduction or of free rides to foot passengers.

Hughes also told the forum that public resistance to the increase in ferry fares was greater than expected.

Ferry traffic figures reveal about a 33 per cent drop in vehicle traffic in the first 12 days of June.

Davis said today he feels it is still too early to tell the real effect of the fare increases. He said tourist traffic is down across Canada and the drop in tourist trade in B.C. may be simply a reflection of that general slump.

Marguerite Carrying More

Tourist flow on the Marguerite is up slightly from last year and getting stronger every day, an advertising spokesman for the vessel said today.

The Marguerite has carried 11,775 passengers in June, up from 9,466 in the same period last year, said Dave Glover of Truman-Glover Ltd., the company which handles advertising for the vessel.

He said there were 707 passengers aboard the Marguerite Monday, up from 475 on the same day last year. On Tuesday there were 848 passengers, up from 225.

The Marguerite has been carrying a full load of 50 cars on each trip and many have been turned away in Seattle, he said.

The ship has actually carried 20,675 passengers so far this year, but 8,900 came in May with the vessel getting off to an early start.

Glover said B.C. Steamships Ltd., which operates the Marguerite, has been carrying out a vigorous advertising campaign in the Seattle area this spring to counter the stay-home-for-the-bicentennial advertising campaign in Washington State.

Special package deals are also being promoted and this has helped increase the flow of tourists on the Marguerite, he said.

"This increase is significant because we have not yet reached the peak season. From June 20 on, the Marguerite has virtually full loads," he said.

"Any increase before that time is very important because it indicates a growth in the tourist industry for Victoria."

HILL SHOWS NO BITTERNESS

Ald. Dave Hill of Central Saanich said today he is resigning as chairman of the Saanich Peninsula Water Committee without bitterness and in hopes it will speed progress towards solving water problems.

Hill, who remains on the committee, said his main reason for stepping down as chairman is that he has found he was unable to properly look after the needs of his own constituents in Central Saanich.

Because Sidney and North Saanich have differing views on how to meet the peninsula's water needs, he found it difficult on many occasions to reconcile his position as both peninsula and Central Saanich spokesman.

Hill said he favors regional control of water distribution but, unlike North Saanich and Sidney, he is opposed to takeover of the four existing water boards on the peninsula by a "super board."

The peninsula committee includes the members of all water boards and councils. It has been working for about two years to solve the present fragmented water administration and annual summer shortages.

Ald. George Westwood of North Saanich was elected chairman of the peninsula committee at a meeting in Sidney today.

max low

Dropped in to give a pint of blood last night and I met a man who had "dropped in" 99 times before me.

Fred De Beck was at Red Cross House on Fort Street to donate his 100th pint of blood. But to him it was no big deal.

It is a big deal, however, to Gerry Savage who, as supervisor, is responsible for organizing between 60 and 70 clinics a year on the Lower Island.

"It's really a tremendous contribution, you know," says Gerry, referring to De Beck's 100-pint effort.

Of course, with higher operating costs and budget cuts hitting the provincial blood bank in Vancouver, the service is stressing the need for getting the maximum number of donors along to each clinic. It has therefore become more vital for each area in B.C. to have a good list of regular donors. And you can't get much more regular than the 100-pinters.

The Red Cross became a little concerned when the number of donors at the last clinics here fell quite a bit below the projected target. But in all it's been a good first half for 1976.

In January, a total of 516 pints of blood were collected at CFB Naden in Esquimalt and that, says Gerry Savage, "is the largest one-day clinic we've ever had."

And in March, the University of Victoria set a record for a three-day clinic with 1,032 pints collected.

(Clinics have been held all this week and the final ones are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on both Thursday and Friday at Newcombe Auditorium. They are aimed primarily at Legislature Buildings staff but are open, of course, to members of the public as well.)

According to Red Cross records, there are seven people on the Island who have given 100 pints or more. Fred De Beck is No. 8.

"We haven't had a 100-pint donor for the last couple of years," says Savage. "But this year, I think there'll be about four."

There is, he says, no restriction on the number of pints of blood one may donate.

"As long as you're between the ages of 18 and 65, it doesn't matter how much you donate," Gerry explains. "You do have to wait 90 days between donations, though but as Savage says, you can donate four times a year if you catch it right.

For someone to reach the 100-pint mark, the supervisor says, they pretty well have to be donating every 90 days.

Fred says he's missed a few times, but then, his first donor days go way back to 1939 when he was in high school.

Now aged 54 and a federal civil servant, Fred likes to tell of the time he was rushed into Victoria General Hospital to give blood for an emergency operation.

"I reported to the hospital laboratory and was promptly ushered to a bed and told to roll up my sleeve," he says. "I was surprised to see a man dressed in a sweater and blue jeans carefully scrubbing his hands. Then he came over and started to take blood from my arm.

"My curiosity was roused, now, and I asked him if he was an intern or a lab technician but he replied, 'Oh, I'm none of those.' I started to think he might be the hospital plumber or a custodian when suddenly he said: 'Half an hourago,Iwasbusyinthe suddenly he said: 'Half an hour ago, I was busy in the garden when I got called in on this emergency case also. I'm Dr. Walther, head pathologist at this hospital.' "

Now Fred's wife and two children — his daughter is training to be a nurse and his son is just finishing high school — are all regular donors.

And will he keep on donating over the 100 mark?

"Sure, I've got no reason to stop," he says with a grin. "I think I've probably got too much blood because I feel better after they've taken some away."

Then Fred De Beck looks serious for a moment.

"You know, it hurts about as much as a mosquito bite. And your blood can be used — so it's much better to be on the giving end than the receiving end."

Fred thanks the volunteers handing out the tea or coffee and cookies afterwards but he confesses there's only one thing he misses from his good old blood donor days gone by.

"When I first started donating blood, they used to give you brandy afterwards," he laughs.

"Now the fringe benefits have gone!"

B.C. products at SAFEWAY

It is always Safeway's policy to support local growers, producers and manufacturers whenever and wherever possible. Safeway features a wide variety of fresh and processed fruits, vegetables and dairy products grown and produced in the rich fertile valleys of British Columbia.

B.C.'s famous fishing industry is represented with a good selection of fresh, frozen and canned seafoods. The forest industry is represented in the majority of paper products which are displayed. . .and in much of the wrapping and packaging material used by manufacturers and at store level.

In addition, support is given to local and national companies with plants in B.C., which process and pack quality items made from both local and imported products.

When you support these "Grown and Made in B.C. Products" you know you are supporting B.C.'s economy.
